BANK CLERK THIEF TELLS OF STEALING

Looting of Bank Covered Period of Five Years—Men Concerned in Game Have Fled from Boston.

The seven Boston gamblers said to have induced George W. Coleman to risk $40,000 of the money of the National City Bank of Cambridge on a faro game, which he promptly lost, were said to-day to have left Boston in a panic when they learned that the young man had made a full confession of how he looted the bank and spent the money. The loss of the bank is estimated at $200,000.

The names of the gamblers are known to the police. Inspector Pat Hurley of the Cambridge police received a letter to-day from a Winthrop business man in which the information that the police had already gathered as to the identity of the men was confirmed. This information was communicated to the Federal authorities and they began a search for the missing persons at once.

It is said that there were three persons in the game. The young defaulter, are said to be after the engaged in separating Coleman from the big bundle of money. It is expected that arrests will be made in the near future.

It is one of the most incredible stories of bank thievery that was ever told. In the pages of fiction such a frenated romance would excite hilarity. That a beardless boy, just out of school, could go into a bank and a national bank at that—start in to steal the money, keep it up for 5½ years and live the life of a high-rolling son of fortune on $12 a week, without interference by some one in authority, is simply incomprehensible to people who have a modicum of horse sense.

But in his confession, so far as it has reached the public, Coleman is not made to "squeal" on his confederates, if he had any. It may be that this part of the program of the law that has been so deliberately suppressed in his case is being purposely suppressed.

There is nothing startling in the confession of Coleman. It is so simple that it is Blame on Liquor.

"If Edmund is to any trouble, then drink did it. He had been drinking a great deal of young as he is. He first drank punch in Medford High School. His mother was a pupil. Probably Principal Manning did not know that punch was being served in the hall.

A month ago Edmund swore off, as we thought. His father got him a job. We had talked and talked to Edmund, and he told us he had quit liquor for good.

Evidently that stuck well in the high school. He ranked A in scholarship. He was second lieutenant in the school battalion and was a member of the track team. He is a fine looking boy, over 6 feet tall. He is of an affectionate disposition and is kind to me. He kissed me good-by yesterday morning when he left the house as usual to go to work.

Wanted a Good Time.

"I don't know of any attachment he had for any particular girl, but he doubtless knew many of them. Most boys do. He always wanted a good time. He would get wild when he was drinking.

"The Swarzehill & Sulzberger people phoned my husband this morning to come in and see them. They told him that Edmund was sent to the bank, he was given $2,277 in cash and checks to deposit. Only $255 of it was in cash."

Hint New Arrests of Those "Higher Up."

It is hinted that there are to be other arrests. One intimation is that some of those who were responsible for things at the bank may have to explain. Another is that Coleman fell an easy dupe to Boston gamblers; but they induced him to go to New York and bewitched him into a game of faro; that he placed $40,000 with adolescent bravado on the turn of a card and lost! The Federal authorities, who are back of the prosecution of the

$414 JUDGMENT ON A BACK BAY HEIR

Franklin I. Fay, who comes of a Commonwealth avenue family, must sell his interest in an estate to satisfy a judgment for $411 rendered against him in the Municipal Court in favor of Michael P. Clarke. Fay has been adjudged a bankrupt. His affairs are in the hands of an assignee, His grandfather, Franklin I. Fay, died in 1905, leaving $300,000 to be divided between his grandson and two granddaughters. Suit fought the judgment given him in the Municipal Court and appealed and the Supreme Court today decided the case against him in the Municipal Court.

12 HURT IN RIOT TROOPS CHARGE MOB

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 26.—A fierce battle between the State Constabulary and riotous strike sympathizers took place just before noon to-day, resulting in the injury of fully a dozen persons. When a number of the mounted constabulary rode by the Majestic Hotel, the crowd pelted them with bottles and stones. The troopers immediately charged upon the mob, riding down the ringleaders. Frank Janbo, who was standing at the bar in the hotel, was fatally shot and fully a dozen others were injured by the rain of bullets from the troopers' revolvers.

Forty-five were arrested. Almost every hour the situation grows worse. All the saloons in the neighborhood of the steel plant have been ordered closed.

Called from Philadelphia, half a troop of the State Constabulary arrived here this morning to suppress rioting at the Bethlehem Steel Company. The incitement of the plant by Charles M. Schwab after strike sympathizers had attacked the men in refusing has increased the seriousness of the situation. The police early to-day frustrated an attempt to dynamite a train on which it was reported that the constabulary were to arrive.

Charged Foreigners.

Much liquor was secured to-day by the elements that yesterday caused the greatest difficulty, and early in the day a resumption of rioting appeared imminent.

Just after their arrival the Black Hussars made a wild charge into a mob of foreigners that had congregated on the street. A number of arrests were made and several foreigners have battered heads as a result of defying the troopers.

One of the foreigners was shot in the foot shortly before 10 o'clock by a member of the State police and was taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

Charles M. Schwab, who is on the ground himself, to-day said: "There is no telling how long the plant will be closed. It may be open Monday, it may be shut down two years. I have given the men an opportunity to earn their bread and they do not seem to want it. I guess they will need it sooner than I will."

$113,070 LAWSUITS FOLLOW BANK CRASH

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Two suits, aggregating $113,070, were brought to-day in the United States Circuit Court against the Delaware & Eastern railroad and the Delaware & Eastern Railway Company as a result of the failure of the Wall street banking house of Searing & Co. Both suits are to recover on notes and judgment. Joseph H. Hines of Pennsylvania obtained two judgments against the railroad company on January 18, 1909, but has been unable to collect. His claims aggregate $108,070. The other claim is on a note for $5,000 held by Morris L. Faire of New Jersey, and is against the railway company, Searing & Co. were the promoters of the two corporations.

ROOSEVELT WELCOME AIDED BY GAYNOR

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Mayor Gaynor will appoint a committee early next week to extend New York's welcome home to ex-President Roosevelt upon his return from Africa and Europe. This was announced to-day, following a suggestion by the Mayor from Collector of the Port Loeb that preparations to greet the distinguished traveler be made.

ALBANIAN TROOPS MASSACRE PRIESTS

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 26.—News of a massacre of Albanians and rumors of a coup by Bulgaria in the Balkans reached here simultaneously to-day.

The massacre took place in the Kossovo district, where all the Servian priests in six villages were tortured and murdered by Albanian soldiers, who also killed many Servian peasants before they were driven off.

The government is alarmed by the report of a Russian Austrian-Servian alliance behind Bulgaria that will plan autonomy for Macedonia and weaken Turkish resources.

60,000 UNION MEN TO JOIN CAR STRIKERS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—That sixty thousand workers have given their pledge to go out on the general strike on the declaration made to-day by John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor Union, who is under arrest on the charge that he incited rioting.

Murphy was held in $2,000 to furnished the bond and was released.

The City Hall was put under heavy guard to-day as the result of the arrest of Murphy. The news that he had actually been arrested spread quickly, and extra details of police were rushed to the City Hall, where crowds began to gather. When the crowds began to congregate about the City Hall every available policeman in the immediate vicinity was summoned for duty there, and the outlying districts were drawn upon, while mounted men were called in from the reserves. In the corridors of the City Hall scores of specials were stationed with orders to allow no one to pass save those on business. Murphy was held in $2,000 bail.

"The strike is a memory. In the middle of the police, as described by Director of Public Safety Clay to-day. To show his sweetness, Clay issued an order forbidding the use of wagons for transportation of coal instead of insisting on ridding on the cars of the Rapid Transit Company. Many of these wagons have been operated by striking carmen to swell the union funds. Regarding suggestions of arbitration, the company officials declare that those strikers who apply individually for positions by Sunday night will be treated as new applicants, but that after that time none will be given any consideration.

C. O. Pratt declared that the strikers would not return to work on the terms offered by the company. He declared that the firm stood ready to go into court and the company agree to fair arbitration of all differences. The company declared that it would not recognize the union and reserved its right to employ and discharge whomsoever it pleased, but it expressed a willingness to meet the men as soon as normal conditions are restored.

In spite of the declarations of the officials and Director Clay the labor world to-day is in a state of tense excitement. The time for the general strike will be decided to-morrow at a meeting of representatives of the biggest labor bodies in the city and the American Federation of Labor.

Monday morning the workmen plan to march 100,000 strong to the fourth of them women—on the City Hall and demand recognition for the striking workmen and a concession to their rights.

EXPRESS TRAIN WRECKED.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 26.—The Pennsylvania limited, eastbound, was derailed forty miles west of here to-day by ditchs swiping a freight train. Its equipment was practically demolished, but not a passenger or trainman was injured.

FREE GLAVIS OF ACTING IN DOUBLE ROLE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—W. Burr, a timber merchant of Seattle, who has employed the services of L. R. Glavis since the latter was dismissed from the Government service, was the principal on the witness stand when the Ballinger-Pinchot committee met to-day.

Before the adjournment yesterday Attorney Vertrees, representing Mr. Ballinger, attempted to show that in Glavis's employment by Burr Glavis was guilty of an impropriety similar to that which he charged against Mr. Ballinger in that he used knowledge in his employment which he had gained in the Government service. The fact developed, however, that Burr had simply engaged Glavis to investigate the record in connection with certain indemnity lands claimed by the State of Washington and which Burr wished to acquire by location.

The cross-examination to-day did not show that Glavis had committed any impropriety in accepting the employment which Burr offered. Burr said he understood that if the land could be acquired they would share alike.

Andrew Kennedy, the former coal expert of the General Land Office was then called to the stand.

Kennedy read the letters of instructions which Glavis had written him directing the field examination of coal claims in Alaska. It requested such work be in harmony with Gabriel Wincate, the coal expert, sent out by the forestry service. Kennedy said Glavis had given him no directions as to what his report should say and he understood that he should work in harmony with Wincate. Mr. Vertrees read and Mr. Kennedy identified a letter he had written to Glavis from Alaska, showing that he and Wingate could not agree as to the coal bearing character of the lands under investigation. Witness was impressed with the fact that there was coal, while Wincate, representing the forestry service, which wanted the land reserved in the forest reserve, reported that there was little coal on the properties. Kennedy estimated that there was 50,000,000 tons of coal in the Cunningham group. He said the Alaskan coal fields were very valuable. The coal veins from one to twenty-three feet in width and outcroppings twenty-six feet wide. For strategic purposes Alaska coal is as good as any. Kennedy said the field he examined in which the Cunningham group is located is about fifteen miles long by five in width. In twenty-five years' experience he had never known a section so rich in coal.

GIRL PRISONER IS TAKEN TO NEW YORK

Daisy Russell, alias Ida Muir, who is wanted in New York on a charge of stabbing a man was to-day given into the custody of a New York inspector of police, she waived extradition. She told the police when arrested that she had stabbed a man and that she was out on bail when she read that a man guilty of the same offence had just been sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. New York then didn't look good to Daisy and she came here. Here she was arrested on a charge of larceny.

EDWARD WOODSIDE, BOY WHO VANISHED WITH FIRM'S MONEY

This picture shows Edward in the costume of a runner at Medford High School. He is a good runner. After being employed a week by a Boston business house, he is charged with running away with $2,277.72. So far as the police know he is running yet.

BOY AND CASH ARE HUNTED

The Boston police are scouring today for Edmund Woodside, eighteen years old and a fine-weed clerk for Schwarzehill & Sulzberger, who has been missing since he started for a bank yesterday with $2,277.72 of the firm's money in cash and checks.

A warrant for the arrest of the young messenger was issued from the Municipal Court this afternoon. It charges him with the theft of $2,000. Inspector Patterson and two other officers immediately left for New York, where they believe the young man is now spending the money.

Mrs. William Woodside, the boy's mother, of No. 6 Park Street court, Medford, thinks that something has occurred to the boy and that he may have been enticed into the toils of designing persons. He is addicted, she admits, to the liquor habit. She made the startling statement that he first drank intoxicating liquor as a high school gathering in Medford High School Hall more than a year ago. His mother said to-day in discussing the lad's disappearance:

GRAND TRUNK WINS OUT IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 26.—At noon meetings of the Aldermen and Common Council to-day unanimous indorsement was given the plan of the Grand Trunk Railroad to run a line from Palmer, Mass., to Pawtucket and this city. All Providence members of the General Assembly are to be asked by the City Council to vote for a charter for the Southern New England Railroad, by which name the connecting line will be known.

The Grand Trunk, one of the greatest railroad systems in America, controls a branch of the Central Vermont Railroad which runs to Palmer, and if permission is granted by the Massachusetts and Rhode Island legislatures a line will be established to this city. Mayor Henry Fletcher, who heartily favors the plan, says such a line will make Providence one of the leading transcontinental ports.

WAVE ROBS BIG MAURETANIA OF 5-TON ANCHOR

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The giant liner Mauretania reached her pier here to-day after two terrific battles with storms in her voyage from Liverpool. The giant ship carried heavy sea scars. Her bridge lights had been beaten out by terrific waves, a 10,000-pound anchor had been ripped from its moorings and hurled into the sea, and her officers, crew and passengers braved a night of relief when the ship was finally safe in New York. Captain Turner said he had never passed through worse weather in all his career as a seaman. Aboard ship was Thomas Martin, the English pilot, who had to make the trip across because the seas were too heavy for the pilot boat to leave Martin, who has crossed the ocean five times in every sort of weather publicly says rejoining his pilot boat, was seasick during the entire trip and was downcast about it. Not a passenger escaped seasickness, and many of them were in a state of terror, as waves were the two days.

The Mauretania sailed from the other side February 19. On Midnight Sunday she encountered a big storm. The seas were so high that they washed against the Sun deck, eighty feet above the water line, tore out the lights, drenched the captain and his officers, and came very near driving them from their posts. The ceiling of the bridge's overhang was ripped out, every deck was awash and one big sea savagely smashed the ship's stern and carried away the flag staff.

Captain Turner fought his way through this storm only to get another on Thursday night. The engines were slowed down and once again the big ship began a battle for life and the lives of all aboard. An entire day was spent in the battle and brought the sea-scarred Mauretania into port twenty-four hours late.

DESPERATE CONVICT IS SHOT TO DEATH

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 26.—Harvey Johnson, the most desperate life prisoner in the State Penitentiary, was shot to death to-day while trying to escape. He hid in the boiler shop for a week recently and bloodhounds had to be brought in to end him.

HUNT FOR GAMBLER WHO HELPED FLEECE COLEMAN

Easy Victim

Fell To Gamblers' Tales.

prelude to Coleman's confession he Assembly where prisoners who steal Home banks go when they are sen-victed. He was told that they go to Atlanta—Charles W. Morse's case was probably recalled.

"Well, I'm willing to go there," said the young man with a sigh.

Then he told the story of his downfall. He started in the bank at seventeen, a boy of promise, with a father of stability behind him. He got $5 a week. Two years later he found that there were opportunities for speculation—if he could get money. The bank had money, why not borrow it?

He went into stocks—won and lost—bet—lost? Desperately, he fell an easy victim to the seductive stories of the gamblers. He lost. The election came around. Sorrow looked sure to him. He said he have locked him for $10,000. That, too, went up in smoke.

For five years this losing game went on and the money of the depositors of the bank dwindled. About all they had in the bank were figures, and many of them made in lead pencil at that! Still the mad orgie of dissipation, ends of which received right into the bank building, went on.

Lured by Lights In Gay Bohemia.

Of course, there was the inevitable feminine fringe to his financial frivolity. He said court in a pathetic way that he had three young women. At that women like is that white-lighted world he gave them. And there was no dodging about it. He and one girl could be found registered in Hotel Lenox, Boston. He and another girl could be found at the prominent eating places of Boston.

The people in the streets of Cambridge knew all about it. They chatted about it in the restaurants in that classic city and wondered how long it would last.

Coleman wondered, too, and actually grew impatient for the ending. Just as Hall of Southbridge did. Two weeks ago, he declared in his confession, he gave them proof positive of his duplicity. They refused to believe it. Is it any wonder that he beg stole about all the money in the bank? The only wonder, according to the discussion one hears all about Greater Boston, is that he did not mortgage the building!

Young Coleman spent last night in the Charles street jail, and slept fitfully. He was up early to-day and walked about until breakfast time. He asked with eagerness as to whether any one had been to ask about him. His call was $50,000, and his father, who is a coal merchant in Cambridge, is trying to raise it.

Get Names of Men Said to Run Faro.

Should his relatives not be able to get the bail, Coleman's attorney, Lawyer Cronin, will make no application that the bail be reduced.

It was learned to-day that the Cambridge police have got the names of the men who are said to have moved young Coleman out of a large sum, said to be $40,000, at faro. A business man of Winthrop the fished the names to the police, and that age of the men lives in Winthrop and another in Revere. The names have been turned over to the Federal authorities.

Coleman, in his confession, said that he had not seen Mrs. Marguerite Taylor, to whom he has been so generous since he left Cambridge a week ago yesterday. It was said to-day that the Cambridge police had received word from Mrs. Taylor was expected back home and that they would be able to have a talk with her soon. They want Mrs. Taylor to tell them, if she knows, how Coleman spent the money, and possibly give them a line on some of the persons who participated.

Here is Coleman's confession as given out by his lawyer, John J. Cronin:

Directors Blind to Coleman's Own "Tip."

"In the hope that he would be detected Coleman two weeks ago gave a tip to the directors of the National City Bank that his books were being juggled. They called for a specific list of some of the largest depositors. Coleman gave them the figures, expecting that a discovery of his thefts would result. The total of these deposits was almost as large as the entire deposits of the bank as shown on the official report. This was enough to have caused an investigation, but the directors passed it over by telling Coleman he was mistaken. The young man did not have the heart to take the initiative in a confession."

"Coleman for over a year had been preying that he be discovered. The constant worry and fear as well as the knowledge that he had broken his trust preyed on the young man's mind. Then he gave the tip to the directors of the bank. It was a plain, open hint that something was wrong, but they failed to grasp it.

"With the evidence right before their eyes the directors failed to see the light.

"They made a comparison of the two amounts and then told Coleman that he was not to make a mistake as to the deposits asked for.

Nerve Fails in First Effort to Confess.

"It was one of those cases where a man's nerve fails him when it comes to taking the initiative in a confession. So Coleman said nothing, and the directors went away satisfied that he had made an error in his figures.

"The story of Coleman's downfall extends back five years. He was nineteen years old when he succumbed to the temptation of glittering gold. He entered the employ of the bank at seventeen years at a salary of $5 per week.

"The stock market had lured him. He wished to try his luck, and did so with the bank's money.

"As is usually the case, his first investment was a profitable one.

"Then he tried again and—lost.

"Several subsequent investments brought him to a realization that a good lump of the bank's money had gone. To recoup those losses and make good to the bank before being discovered then became his aim. He invested at different times in various business interests. He had holdings in five.

"The gains that he had expected did not realize. Some of the companies in which he was a partner went to the wall.

"I am able to say that the greater part of the bulk of the money that he took was lost in those business enterprises. Had they all returned the profits he had took would, George Coleman would stand to-day to-day square with the bank, and no one would ever know that he had abstracted funds.

"Aside from the business investments there are small losses from the gambling and from money spent in a sporting way. A man might spend $500 a night in a sport and be unable to account for it.

"Of course I cannot explain the exact way that the entire amount went, but to repeat that the greater part was sunk in the business enterprises.

"I cannot make any statement as to Coleman's standing with the Boston agency of the Knox Law Company, but I have said that he held one-third interest at $10,000. As treasurer I do not think that he is under obligation to the agency for funds.

Relatives Ready to Make Losses Good.

When Coleman went away on Friday he did not do so because of fear of detection. He was simply taking a vacation of a few days. He did not realize that the revelation was at hand. When he heard that it was he came back.

"I tendered to ex-Governor Bates the services of Coleman and myself in the work of clearing up the matter in the counts.

"Mrs. Marguerite Taylor has not been in communication with Coleman since she left Cambridge. Where she is Coleman does not know.

"I know nothing of an accomplice or of Coleman having been induced into speculating by some one. From what I have learned it is a case of the young man being tempted in too responsible a position at a small salary.

"It was only during this last year that Coleman's salary was raised to $12 per week.

"Had the directors been vigilant they would have caught him when he began speculating with the funds. Unfortunately sentence would have suffered instead of the penalty that he is receiving, by ex-Gov. R. Bradford & Sly.

Detectives on Trail.

Preparing for the greatest legal battle in the history of fights on corporations in America, Prosecutor Garven announced today that he had dispatched detectives to Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis to serve capiases on the indicted officials. While the Grand Jury resumed its investigation of the methods of the Beef Trust and the cold storage houses, this action was going on. Prosecutor Garven is ready for a hard struggle to compel the National Packing Company officials to produce their books, and behind this lies his determination to grapple with the trust in a struggle for its dissolution.

The fight to-day, however, is centred on the efforts of the Jersey authorities to get the indicted men to Jersey City for trial. Prosecutor Garven declared that the usual processes had been determined on, but that every effort would be made to get the accused within the jurisdiction of the court as speedily as possible.

With the capiases sent out to-day to the chiefs of police in the cities where the Beef Trust men are expected to be located went also a compiled copies of the indictment and requests that the accused men be taken into custody forthwith.

Cold Storage Corner.

Following the expectation of these instructions extradition proceedings will be taken up.

"The investigation has been thorough," said Prosecutor Garven, "and we have brought out evidence so strong that I have no doubt that convictions will be secured.

"The National Packing Company, a New Jersey corporation, has without doubt been closely connected with the conditions that have aroused the nation. There is even less doubt that its officers instigated the policy of forcing up the prices of meat by cornering the supply in cold storage and forcing a fictitious shortage."

This connection between the prosecutor of "the mother of trusts," against a combine that holds in its grip the food supply of a nation is one of the most remarkable struggles of its kind that has marked American history since the trust first loomed to the fore as a problem to the United States.

The rumors that Mr. Garven had been offered a bribe to drop the prosecution added to the interest of the situation. Proceeding under an old common law and backed by an active grand jury, Garven in three weeks, virtually single handed, has piled up a mass of evidence and secured indictments under which twenty-one of the foremost men in one of the nation's biggest industries face fines of $1,000 each or three years' imprisonment or both.

MOVE NEXT WEEK TO END BEEF TRUST

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 26.—Justice Swayze of the State Supreme Court announced to-day that he would entertain next week a motion by Prosecutor Garven and Hudson county for the dissolution of the National Packing Company, generally known as the Beef Trust, on the ground that it does not keep the records of meetings in the State of New Jersey as the law requires.

The indicted Beef Trust officials must surrender for trial in this State or extradition proceedings will be begun, the millionaires arrested and brought here in handcuffs, if necessary, to answer to the indictments returned late yesterday, charging conspiracy to limit the supply of meat and poultry. This is the plan of Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven of Hudson County, and those are the men and companies on whose head he is to-day:

Individuals—J. Ogden Armour, A. Watson Armour, Louis F. Swift, Edward F. Swift, Charles H. Swift, Edward Morris, Jr., Arthur Meeker, Edward Tilden, L. A. Carton, Thomas E. Wilson, Charles J. Cooney, Jr., Edward Morris, Jr., E. Baillargeé, Jr., George Hunkel, Joseph A. Cooney, D. F. Cooney, H. B. Darlington, W. A. A. Fuller, Leonard C. Patterson.

Detectives on Trail.

Preparing for the greatest legal battle in the history of fights on corporations in America, Prosecutor Garven announced today that he had dispatched detectives to Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis to serve capiases on the indicted officials. While the Grand Jury resumed its investigation of the methods of the Beef Trust and the cold storage houses, this action was going on. Prosecutor Garven is ready for a hard struggle to compel the National Packing Company officials to produce their books, and behind this lies his determination to grapple with the trust in a struggle for its dissolution.

The fight to-day, however, is centred on the efforts of the Jersey authorities to get the indicted men to Jersey City for trial. Prosecutor Garven declared that the usual processes had been determined on, but that every effort would be made to get the accused within the jurisdiction of the court as speedily as possible.

With the capiases sent out to-day to the chiefs of police in the cities where the Beef Trust men are expected to be located went also a compiled copies of the indictment and requests that the accused men be taken into custody forthwith.

Cold Storage Corner.

Following the expectation of these instructions extradition proceedings will be taken up.

"The investigation has been thorough," said Prosecutor Garven, "and we have brought out evidence so strong that I have no doubt that convictions will be secured.

"The National Packing Company, a New Jersey corporation, has without doubt been closely connected with the conditions that have aroused the nation. There is even less doubt that its officers instigated the policy of forcing up the prices of meat by cornering the supply in cold storage and forcing a fictitious shortage."

This connection between the prosecutor of "the mother of trusts," against a combine that holds in its grip the food supply of a nation is one of the most remarkable struggles of its kind that has marked American history since the trust first loomed to the fore as a problem to the United States.

The rumors that Mr. Garven had been offered a bribe to drop the prosecution added to the interest of the situation. Proceeding under an old common law and backed by an active grand jury, Garven in three weeks, virtually single handed, has piled up a mass of evidence and secured indictments under which twenty-one of the foremost men in one of the nation's biggest industries face fines of $1,000 each or three years' imprisonment or both.

BURROWS AND BRIDE TO GET LYNN SERENADE

LYNN, Feb. 25.—Councilman Charles I. Burrows and his bride of a few hours, formerly Dr. Marion Cowan, the well-known woman physician, who stole a march on their friends and were married in Philadelphia, are spending their honeymoon today at the St. Charles Hotel, Atlantic City. The announcement of their marriage greatly surprised their hundreds of friends in this city. These friends are planning to serenade the couple on their return to Lynn next week.

The bride is well known in Boston medical circles, having lectured on chemistry before the students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She has been prominent in Lynn social circles and has had many suitors for her hand.

Mr. Burrows is in the real estate business. He came to Lynn a few years ago from Manchester, N. H., to settle the estate of his dead brother. He has since been assisting in adjusting the estate which was a large one. He will inherit a large part of it.

WORK ON CONVEYOR HALTED BY STRIKE

Work on the grain conveyor, which is being built at the Chelsea Bridge in Charlestown, ceased at noon to-day when the Carpenter District Council of Greater Boston called a strike of fifteen union carpenters. The union alleges that the contractors, Pitman & Brown, are not paying the union scale and are not observing the regular half holiday Saturday.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight London Time

Mrs. Sterling's Affection for Lord Scares Family.

LONDON—It was learned to-day that there is a close attachment existing between Lord George Hugo Cholmondeley and Mrs. John Alexander Stirling, whose husband secured a divorce last Spring as the result of a suit in which he named Lord Northland. Mrs. Sterling, who was Clara Taylor of Washington, had filed a cross suit, naming Mrs. Atherton. Mrs. Sterling returned to the stage as a show girl in "Our Miss Gibbs." When the Cholmondeley family heard of her latest romantic affair they were much worried, and they have been doing their utmost to break it up. A representative of the family met Mrs. Sterling at the Olympia skating rink and prevailed upon her to sign an agreement to give six months' notice before she married Lord George. In return for this it is said she received handsome compensation.

Labor Losing $5,000,000.

LONDON—When the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne was resumed in the Commons George Lloyd Courthope moved an amendment urging the protection of British labor against negro labor employed in hop cultivation on the Pacific coast. Mr. Courthope said that in the past twenty-five years the acreage in hops in England had decreased 54 per cent. The loss in wages to British laborers had been $5,000,000. The amendment was lost.

Reds Win in Mock War.

MANILA—Charles Smith of Detroit, president of the Philippine Railroad and Manila Trolley and Light Companies, will be banqueted by officials and merchants. Brigadier-General Pots, in command of the Red Army, has landed in the passe of the mountains above Olongapo, ending the war. It was a theoretical victory for the Red Army attack.

$14,600,000 Lost in French Flood.

PARIS—Health reports indicate that the measures taken following the flood to prevent an epidemic were efficacious. The report of the flood damage in eighteen out of eighty-six departments show of monetary loss of $14,600,000. This includes the $10,000,000 damage done in Paris.

Protest Holds Up Prizes.

GENOA—A report that Americans are embarrassed by the Swiss Aero Club's delay in appointing a time and place for the next aviation meeting is unfounded. Captain Mecacci of the Zurich troops was forwarded to C. F. Bishop a week ago, but the other prizes are detained, owing to the protests made by the representatives of the disqualification of Leblanc.

Explorer Has Heart Trouble.

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile—Dr. Jean Charcot, the French explorer, who charted new land in the Antarctic, made many important scientific observations which will prove of enormous value, endured great hardships, had many narrow escapes from death and suffered from heart trouble, according to a suit, has left here on his way back to France.

Millions Lost in Oil War.

LONDON—Referring to the rate cutting in the last year in the Mexican oil industry between the Waters-Pierce group and the English interests represented by Sir Weetman Pearson, the Evening Standard says a fairly accurate estimate of the English losses would be between $3,750,000 and $5,000,000.

Bryan Doesn't Want to Run.

VALPARAISO—W. J. Bryan, interviewed on the attitude of American parties toward Kirk's policy with Latin-America, declared that there is no reason why the American people should not be friendly. He stated that he neither desired nor expected to be again a candidate for the Presidency.

DRAPER LAUDS JUDGE; WON'T CENSURE HIM

Governor Draper, in a formal reply to Secretary Abrahams of the Boston Central Labor Union, declines to censure Judge Walt of the Massachusetts Superior Court for his recent remarks from the bench regarding labor unions and the appren-ticeship system.

The resolution of protest sent to the Governor by Mr. Abrahams said:

"The Boston Central Labor Union, composed of affiliated locals representing God-fearing, law-abiding citizens of Massachusetts, shall take such action as will fully assure our citizens that the courts are not to be used as instruments intended them to be—judicial tribunals."

Quotes Constitution.

Governor Draper in his reply quotes the law and says:

"I must inform you that the constitution of Massachusetts provides, in part second, chapter III, article I, that:

"All judicial officers, duly appointed, commissioned, and sworn, shall hold their offices during good behavior . . . provided, nevertheless, the Governor, with the consent of the Council, may remove them upon the address of both houses of the Legislature.

"It was the purpose of those who framed the Constitution, and of the people who adopted it, to establish a carefully prepared system of government, consisting of three coordinate departments, executive, legislative and judicial, each, as far as practicable, independent of the others, each balancing yet protecting, checking yet preserving the others. In this division of the functions of government it was undoubtedly deemed to be of the first importance for the protection of the liberties and rights of the citizens that the judiciary should be put upon such a basis as would protected by such constitutional guarantees, that it should be free, and should be independent and free from undue control and encroachments by the other departments.

Praises Judge Walt.

"The important and exceptional power exercising the judiciary can be exercised only by the concurrent action of both houses of the legislature or by impeachment as provided by Chapter I, section II, Article VIII, of the Constitution. You will observe also that the Constitution of the Commonwealth provides a way of discipline for judges, short of impeachment. The Governor of the Commonwealth, or, under certain circumstances, the Governor, either by direct judge or to ascertain if there is cause for complaint and to report to him, has power to remove the judge for it.

"The Justice of the Superior Court mentioned in your communication has earned a high reputation for integrity and ability, and I am sure that the high opinion in which he is held by the people and bar of the county is well deserved."

How the

Central Trust Company

Protects Its Depositors

Every year the stockholders elect an examining committee, on which no executive officer and no member of the investment committee can serve.

At some unannounced time during the year, this committee makes an examination and also employs an expert accountant who makes a thorough audit of the bank's books and accounts, which takes several weeks' time.

This is entirely in addition to the two examinations made each year by the State Banking Department.

The CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY has a capital, surplus, profits and stockholders' liability of $525,000 for the protection of its depositors.

Its total assets are $2,300,000, the largest of any national bank or trust company in Cambridge.

The banks and trust companies in Cambridge by their returns to the state showed the following results from February 5, 1909, to January 31, 1910:

	Total resources	Per cent on capital, surplus and undivided profits	Added to undivided profits
CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY	$47,133	16.5	$38,133
CAMBRIDGE TRUST COMPANY	31,055	10.8	21,055
CHARLES RIVER NATIONAL BANK	26,277	10.3	8,276
HARVARD TRUST COMPANY	26,591	7.3	11,591
LECHMERE NATIONAL BANK	20,446	9	9,446
NATIONAL CITY BANK	2,402	1.6	2,007 decrease

Though no official arrangements for taking over the depositors' accounts of the National City Bank have been made with any banking institution, the CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY will be glad to arrange with depositors and box holders for the continuance of banking facilities without interruption.

Public Confidence

The strength of the Old Colony Trust Company, since its consolidation with the City Trust Company, is measured not only by resources which exceed $70,000,000, but by a position in the confidence of the public which has been built up by both institutions through consistent adherence to the soundest banking principles.

'I OUGHT,' FOR GIRLS, NOT 'I WANT,' SAYS MARGARET DELAND

The change in the feminine ideal—the dangers to the race in its divorce and selfishness and the hopes for the individual in the emancipation of the sex—are the subject of a remarkable article in the current number of the Atlantic Monthly by Margaret Deland. It is not an attack on woman's suffrage, nor a defence; it is a careful analysis of the woman's attitude to-day and its possible effect on the race.

To the emancipation of women Mrs. Deland traces in part the modern divorce evil, the development of a dangerously selfish spirit and the lack of respect for law. To the same emancipation she traces, on the other hand, the development of the healthy type of woman, the increased mentality of the sex and its greater activity for good. On the suffrage question she steers a middle course, believing in a restricted ballot for women—in time.

Self and Duty Clash.

The sense of duty and the sense of self are clashing in this new movement, she points out. And in the clash have come certain evils. The new ideal is thrust-ing its way into the social order by making divorces frequent and fashionable; it is foreordaining the state by raising shallow women in a position where they may have a chance to "reform on sentiment"; it is removing the word "could" from the moral vocabulary of the nation, and substituting the words "I will" or "I want."

Mrs. Deland seems to us giving her impression of the woman of the past, quoting an old versifier:

The bride of course, fainted;
For bashfulness accented;
With modesty, she knew what was right.
But nowadays," she says, "brides hard-ly blush, much less faint. Instead our girls are approaching Walt Whitman's ideal woman. He sang:

I see that they are worthy of me—I will be the robust husband of these superb creatures.
They are not one bit less than I am.
They are tanned in the face by the shining suns and blowing winds;
Their flesh has the old divine suppleness and strength;
They know how to swim, row, ride, wrestle, shoot, run, leap, strike, retreat, advance, resist, defend themselves;
They are candid in their manners, they are clear in the eye, self-possessed of themselves.

Differs from Roosevelt.

But with all this Mrs. Deland finds grave danger. The individualism is ruining play with the people, the girls no longer feel duty as they did, except duty to themselves.

"Our girls know how to say 'I want' or 'I will' or 'I must,' but they are not learning to say 'I ought.' Instead the education of to-day too often cries out to them, 'Never mind other people; make the most of your own life. Never mind marriage; it is an incident; men have proved it for themselves.'"

Here Mrs. Deland takes up the cudgels in favor of restricting the birthrate and attacks the attitude of former President Roosevelt.

"There is another point of conspicuous difference, and of tremendous social significance, between the women of yesterday and the women of to-day. We have come to appreciate the fact that our marriage laws were unconscientious concerning the right of children and to be born into a happy home—alas, only just beginning—to say that when parents, unable to support a child in physical and moral and intellectual well-being, bring such a child into the world, for the State, or for their own private relations, to support, they are socially criminal.

"Contra r our mothers' ideas of large f am ilies with their 'Quantity, not quality,' marked the good mother of fifty or sixty years ago. And there are—I am told—some of them in high places—who still cling to that tradition, but our mothers had to act, such persons whether the State should have been made a party, in a recent notorious murder trial in New York, the principal had been twice.

Denounces Divorce Evil.

Returning to her discontent among women she points out that the discontent of the wife now is not the important matter to consider.

"Nor shall I refer to the discontent of foolish or sensual husbands, or of those weak minds that are discontented unless they drop themselves with unsuspected novelty and recklessness, whether playing, theatre going, or in women spiritualists and cranks, who have put their set in shame in the last few or two by the wild velocity of their silly and hideous antics; but I do not generally such women are either too insolent or too ridiculous to do much harm to the community, their example be-ing really a warning.

Mrs. Deland leaves her main subject long enough to make a powerful attack on divorce and the marriage of ill-mated persons. "There is another threat to the integrity of the Republic, and to my mind it is most serious of all, I mean the matter of divorce, the menace to the supreme individualism.

"And we must sometimes agree to that free indeed, some of us would do more than merely agree, as would protest vig-orously and express our opinion with effect enough for the good of the State—for if the State guards and for its welfare on the preservation of the family, the family for its existence depends on the preservation of its own unity. To im-pugn lightly within the little circle of a wedding ring does not often make a fam-ily. It generally destroys it. Divorce in Mexico is sometimes the only way to settle the matter, but why should we have put in heavenly by any careless liberty in the matter of marriage.

Happiness an Incident.

"But the individual morality, which recognizes the business of a marriage without respect, pose, often, a step fur-ther, and says that happiness is not an end-thing; it is not content with that, which would answer—peace, duty, service, honor, and decency. Following the assup-tion that happiness is the end of life for the sake of morality, causes the admis-sion that the right to strife for the sake of the individual's future happiness, to obtain a divorce, and marry A, B, or C, whom I love—they love him or her. Which is to make me happy.

"Which surely is the heart of the whole matter; the demand for personal happi-ness, and the fact that the individual will hand we touch what seems to be the fu-ture of perfect in our present social arrangements. The individual believes that happiness is the end of life, and that where happiness is only an incident of existence, that existence is impossible, the preservation of the family lies. Happiness and existence, and the family, they said they did! But if the incident of happiness is lost, duty remains. The obligation of outward vows, marriage vows made by males, even though, for profounder right-ness, means the duty to have the courage to separate by the width of the world, if necessary, be willingly, and to live unstaining civilized.

Mrs. Deland then turns to the desire for the ballot and its dangers.

"While this instinct is crying in the wilderness for self-culture, self-ad-vancement, self-distinction—but not of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life—it is crying in the other side for the ballot as a means to self-development, and we call the sense of social responsibility.

Danger in Shallowness.

"This sense of social responsibility is expressing itself and itself in the determination of women to exercise the privilege. How courageous and fine and strenuous it all is. Every one agrees, shows its obvious hopefulness; but it is the danger which lies behind it, the danger it is shallowness which is too apt to be overlooked.

"This sense of social responsibility has been used by unscrupulous, ill-edu-cated woman's demand for the ballot, is the cause of the absolute subtlest pos-session of the human creature's most eager, unused hands has come this prize-ing—for prize indeed it is—to the ballot charities, in our passionate reforms, in our right handed activities, but not in our sentimental exclusiveness, nor was honestly deep as excited, concerted, unscrupulous emptiness which is saturated with sentimen-tality and its false title of being an spiritual instinct as a new plaything; and surely, the danger in the promise is shal-lowness.

"In their passionate desire for the public good, women must not lose their hearts and less head, than men; they seem to be more single-minded, but with all their earnest-ness, there is a sentimentality, a lawless-ness, an emotional shallowness, a lack of thoroughness, in the way in which they ap-proach public questions, which, rather than from the question of doubling the respon-sible vote, makes the matter of their exer-cising the suffrage alarming. And nothing is their shallowness more alarming than their indifference to law.

"But with her new sense of social re-sponsibility, she drinks—and she is not the Devil; and the advocates of high li-cense are preferred to the saloon—but She is going to shut up the saloon—just as the passing of the Devil, with all ready abolished the canteen in the army with a corresponding and awful increase of drunkenness. The education of the restraint has no part in the New Woman's scheme of reform. She does not take into account the slow and painful process of evolution which has, in a hundred years, brought about a fine temperance than our fathers could have dreamed of in the days when it was gentlemanly to roll under the table after dinner.

GIRL CHEATED BY DEATH'S HAND OF BEDSIDE WEDDING

BERTHA M. LOUD

Fiancee of man who died at City Hospital while she rushed in auto for license.

BRIDE RACES FOR LICENSE; GROOM DIES

Death would not wait. Just a few minutes was all that was asked; but the Grim Reaper was inexorable. Five minutes more and he might have written the words into his contract.

"Curse death do us part." But he would not wait. In the City Hospital last night, a stage where tragedy is seldom displaced, a human drama found a setting.

Benjamin Arthur Kemboon was dying. At his side sat Miss Bertha M. Loud, his fiancee.

"Oh, Ben, don't say it. You must recover," she pleaded.

"It's no use, Bertha," said the dying man. "I'm all in. I feel it. Don't cry, dear."

The next moment Kemboon made a desperate effort to rise. He fell back exhausted.

"Get a minister. You shall be my wife," he gasped.

Miss Loud agreed that it was the only way.

A hospital physician, not long ago married himself, got the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson on the telephone.

"I'll come right away," said Dr. Johnson, ordering out his big motor car, which was dying with the wings of the wind.

Another car, raced with Miss Loud to the home of City Registrar McGleenn in Boston. He gave her a license.

"Ben, then, here I am. I am back, dear," cried the almost hysterical young woman as she entered the room.

"We tried to hold him," said the young physician. "But it was no use. He refused to wait."

The frightened bride was taken from the room, her sobs and the lamentations of the dying man's aged parents filling the house and orderlies did much to do just then.

Kemboon was born in St. Alban's, Vt., forty-five years ago, and was in the building business at No. 27 School street. He was widely known in Malden, Roxbury, the South End and the Back Bay alike. He was an artist as well as a builder and his mural decorations are in many rich Boston homes.

Miss Loud and the man's parents have taken the body back to Malden for interment.

Five minutes more. But Death would not wait.

BOSTON ALUMNI OF VERMONT AT DINNER

A large number of the members of the Boston Alumni Association of the University of Vermont attended the regular dinner at the Boston City Club last night. Dr. Frank W. Ayer, president of the association, was toastmaster. Dr. Francis J. Garrey spoke of the properties of a proficient press association in connection with the growth of educational institution. Professor Carroll W. Doten of Technology discussed the future of the American College. Impromptu remarks were made by George H. Kimball and S. S. Brooks, vice-president of the association. Messrs. Doten, Dennis and Brennan were appointed a committee to report to the next meeting in April, means for forming a closer organization of the Boston Alumni.

MEYER CALLS FOR 28,000-TON SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Two giant battleships of not less than 28,000 tons each, one repair ship with sufficient speed to keep pace with the battleships when they are built, two colliers and five submarines is the administration naval building program submitted to the Naval Affairs Committee of the House to-day by Secretary Meyer. If the report of Mr. Meyer is followed by Congress the battleships will be the largest and most powerful in the world. The two colliers and submarines interfere with getting action before the House, and the committee to ignore the request for the battleships.

DEPEW USES PHOTOS TO BOOM CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Senator Depew has just given a few stirring words local photographer in his committee room. LUCE WARNS AGAINST ELIOT'S LABOR BILL

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 26.—Robert Luce addressed about 200 members of the Board of Trade to-day on his bill for the compulsory investigation of industrial disputes. He outlined the objects of his bill as an attempt to give the employer, the employe and the general public a fairer chance in case of disagreement. He warned his hearers against the bill introduced by former President Eliot as intended to do away with all form of State mediation in strikes.

GREAT 'WHITE WAY' CHARMS PAPER SELLER

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Keeping the nature of his mission a secret, Charles H. Davenport, a wealthy paper manufacturer of South Hadley, Mass., who for the past week has been in this city searching for his missing son, who mysteriously disappeared February 11, after attending a banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria, left suddenly to-day for Springfield, Mass.

Mr. Davenport called at police headquarters and told Detective Murphy, who has been assigned to the case, that he would leave on an early train for Springfield. When questioned by the newspaper men Mr. Davenport refused to make known the reason for his sudden trip. "My trip was entirely unexpected," he said, "but I shall probably return on Monday."

The police have been told that Mr. Davenport up and down the white light district have found that he was at the Herald square ballet four times and that on the night of Washington's birthday he was dancing at the Hotel Normandie. Mr. Davenport denied a report from Milford, Mass., that his son was in the hands of professional kidnappers, who were holding him for ransom.

"We will hear from my son," he said, "as soon as his student's cash is gone. He'll it will not hold any more highballs and he don't like the fare at the Murray Hill Hotel for his belongings, which he left at the Astor, he dropped out of sight. He's been high rolling for two years, but in this trip he has gone away over. My son never knew what he had this habit until last Saturday, when I began to interview his close associates."

FIRE DAMAGES DEDHAM POLO CLUB $10,000

The handsome home of the Dedham Polo Club in High street, Dedham, with all its furnishings close to $100,000, was nearly damaged by fire just before dawn to-day. The loss is placed at $10,000, but may be much higher.

The butler, Robert Powell, who was aroused by crackling flames, sent in an alarm, two steamers, three hose and two ladder trucks responding. The firemen had a hard time of it with the weather 10 degrees below zero.

The neighboring dwellings were quickly lighted up, and several of the men and women were out to give aid. They also helped to fight the flames, and the women made hot coffee for the fire-fighters.

Some of the prominent guests were Charles H. Loring, Joshua Crane, the noted polo player; Eugene Cochrane, Mrs. Crane, John McGee, Mrs. Charles H. Cole and Mrs. Mary Chase.

It was rumored that several members of the club were insured for the building at the time the fire broke out.

The damage is lessened by the salvage of the furnishings from the lower floor, but the upper floor was much messed by the fire, which almost hides them from view in the piles about the grounds.

MALONE RETIRES; SWIFT MAY RUN

The announcement made by Attorney General Dana Malone of Greenfield that he will be a candidate for re-election next Fall, is taken to mean the nomination by the Republicans of District Attorney James M. Swift of Fall River, for that place.

Some years South eastern Massachusetts has had no representative on the State ticket and last Fall it was agreed by the party leaders that a member of the district place should go to Mr. Swift.

OUR OPERA SECOND TO NONE, SAYS KAHN

Otto H. Kahn, New York financier and one of the powers of the Metropolitan Opera House of New York, and Mrs. Kahn were among the most enthusiastic listeners at last night's performance of "Il Trovatore" as guests of Mr. Eben D. Jordan. "Boston may in truth be proud both of its opera house and its opera company," he said, not paying an exaggerated compliment when I say that both are second to none in the world," said Mr. Kahn, while his wife added with a smile, "and Boston women are among the best dressed and the prettiest. I have seen in any city or in any country."

SOCIETY BELLE BRIDE OF NAVY LEADER TO-DAY

MISS CHRISTINE W. FINN

SOCIETY GIRL WEDS OFFICER IN THE NAVY

One of the most important society events scheduled for to-day was the wedding at the Church of Our Saviour in Brookline this afternoon of Miss Christine Wermouth Finn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Howell Finn of the Hotel Puritan, to Lieutenant George Milbourne Morrow, Jr., of the United States Navy. The wedding was followed by a reception at the Puritan on Commonwealth avenue.

The bride, who wore an imported gown of white satin with a fitted tunic of white point lace made with a court train and a point lace veil, was attended by her sister, Miss Pauline Finn, as maid of honor, and Miss Nathalie Wilting, Miss Cecile Thomson, Miss Mary Whitney and Miss Margaret Boyd of Brooklyn as bridesmaids.

The attendants were gowned alike in rose pink chiffon cloth and held bunches of pink Marryland roses.

The church was decorated in red—the color of the First Artillery Corps of which the bridegroom is First Lieutenant—and deep rose pink.

Lieutenant Leslie Rice of Washington was best man and his ushers included Lieutenant Bartlett, Lieutenant Greene, Lieutenant Hayward and Lieutenant Colwell.

The Reverend Reginald Hebber Howe of Trinity Church, assisted by Dr. Charles Edmondson, organist of the church, played the "Meister Singer Wedding March."

The rooms at the Puritan, where the reception was held, were decorated in the colors of the Artillery Corps and United States flags.

Shortly after the reception the young couple left for a trip to West Point, N. Y., to remain until June, when they will sail for an extended wedding trip through Europe.

STUDENTS LEAP FOR LIFE AS DARTMOUTH DORMITORY BURNS

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 26.—Fifty-five Dartmouth College students, about twenty-three of whom are from Boston and vicinity, escaped death in a fire that destroyed South Fayerweather dormitory early to-day by leaping from two and three-story windows or by feeling, clad in pajamas, sheets and blankets, through flame-swept halls and stairways.

Thirty students on the third and fourth floors carried their lives by sliding down ropes made by tying bed clothes together. They did not have time to dress. They escaped with nothing to spare.

Fifteen Jump for Life.

Fifteen students on the second floor jumped a distance of eight feet to an "L" projection and from there to the ground. The escape of these students was unusual-ly remarkable. It was thought that one or two had met death, but at rollcall later it was found that all were present.

The fire was discovered shortly after 2 o'clock this morning by a student returning from Boston. The flames were then in the basement and were sweeping toward the air shaft. He called to the night watchman who rang in the alarm and then began shouting through the corridors.

The fire gained rapidly and almost before the student could reach the second floor was a sweeping sheet of terrific heat through the air shaft toward the roof. The men in the dormitory fled in confusion as attempts to alarm the sleeping men. Several on the third floor succeeded in getting down the stairways, but a number of others who were sleeping heavily, awoke to find this way cut off by the flames. They leaped from the windows, landing in the heavily piled many feet high.

South Fayerweather dormitory was one of the finest in the college yard. It had been built but a few years and cost $52,000.

Blame Poor Wiring.

Adjoining South Fayerweather were North Fayerweather and Culver Halls, the chemical laboratory, and but 150 feet away Dartmouth Hall. These buildings escaped probably because there was no wind when the fire started.

Both Fayerweather dormitory was three stories high on one side and four on the other. It was planned to house fifty-five students and was fitted with private bathrooms and all modern conveniences. Some of the wealthiest students at the college had rooms there and the furnishings are valuable.

An investigation this forenoon caused the college authorities to announce that the fire was started from defective wiring in the basement.

The students driven from the building saved nothing in the way of personal effects but what they wore or threw out blankets and sheets they snatched from the beds as they fled. One of the old dormitories will be opened temporarily for their use.

Clifford E. Rice of Pittsfield, Mass., and Fred H. Harris of Brattleboro, Vt., were the heroes of the fire. Rice, a member of the senior class, awoke almost with the flames. Rice rushed through the large dormitory and spread the alarm, arousing students and helping them to safety. Harris got down ropes which hung at all of the windows to be used in case

Check That Cold!

It is a great mistake to let a cough or cold run unchecked. Aside from the discomfort and discomfort there is a real danger in the resulting irritation of the throat, lungs and bronchial organs, which often run into more and very susceptible to pneumonia and consumption.

It is not our purpose to recommend any particular remedy for coughs, colds and grippe, but simple, inexpensive and very effective remedy can easily be prepared at home by mixing two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure with eight ounces of pure Whisky. This formula is frequently prescribed and is highly recommended by the Leuch Chemical Co., of Chicago, who prepare the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure for those who prefer druggists.

It is claimed that a teaspoonful of this mixture will break up a day break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable

MANY YANKEE WOMEN BEND KNEE TO QUEEN

By WM. T. STEAD.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The King and Queen of England held the first court of the season at Buckingham Palace. The scene was one of the utmost brilliancy. The Diplomatic Corps attended in full force.

It was the most crowded state function of recent times. The ballroom had been redecorated and refighted, and, when thronged with women in gorgeous toilettes, glistening with jewels, with brilliant army and navy uniforms and with personages in gala court dress, it made a memorable spectacle.

Prince Henry of Prussia was present, but the Princess was prevented from coming by a slight indisposition.

The King, preceded by officers of state, entered the throne room as the band played the national anthem. The Queen was gorgeously robed in rich embroidered satin with countless rows of pearls by way of decoration.

Fair Heads Ablaze With Gems.

Diamond orders half concealed the deep blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter. A large Caithness diamond blazed on her corsage, and on her head was the famous crown of Maltese crosses which her majesty wore on her coronation, the Order of India.

She wore Danish family orders in addition to the diamond star. In her corsage was the famous ruby which Henry V. wore in his helmet at the battle of Agincourt. It is now mounted with the diamond to form a cross.

Princess Christian, Princess Henry of Battenberg, Princess Victoria and Prince Alexander of Teck were also in the royal circle, which was dazzling. Diamond crowns and tiaras flashed from every head.

The court officials acted some debutantes' embarrassment by helping with trains and so got in the way. The Duchess of Norfolk wore a beautiful dress of silver brocade, covered with magnificent old lace.

Mrs. Phillips Presented.

As Mr. Whitelaw Reid was unable to be present, the duty of presenting Americans devolved upon Countess Beuckenkorff, the wife of the Russian Ambassador. One of her most interesting presentations was that of Mrs. Wm. Phillips, wife of the new counselor of the American embassy, whose gown was composed of a new ivory-tinted satin called vestale.

The corsage was draped with a la diane and embroidered in diamonds and pearls in a form of jasmine flowers. The skirt was flounced with old lace caught up with sprays of the same flowers. Veiling her train was the veil the bride recently wore at her wedding. She wore a beautiful tiara of diamonds and a diamond necklace.

Other Americans presented were Mrs. R. N. Fairbanks, president of the Society of American Women of London, in a dress of white satin diamante embroidery on white chiffon; Mrs. Clemens, wife of the naval attaché, who wore a gown of silver tissue with trade of plain chiffon edged with handsome silver lace; the bodice crossed with silver tissue and a rose corsage.

HOW TO CURE ECZEMA

A New Idea That Upsets the Old Method.

The old method of treating eczema and similar skin diseases as blood disorders is being rapidly superseded by the new compound called Cadum. This remedy is applied direct to the affected parts, thus excluding the air and starting the healing process at once. The itching ceases the moment Cadum is applied, and the most stubborn cases yield to its wonderful curative powers in a remarkably short time. Other skin troubles, such as salt rheum, psoriasis, acne, herpes, tetter, itching piles, blackheads, pimples, eruptions, etc., are also cured quickly by Cadum, which is sold by all druggists at 10c. and 25c. a box.

MRS. THOMAS TELLS HOW SHE MADE MITE BOSTON'S BEST DOG

MRS. GEO. S. THOMAS AND HER PRIZE DOG.

"I love dogs. I have no other hobby. I have no children, so I have plenty of time on my hands. The dogs interest and amuse me. They take up the time, too, which many women spend in the nursery. If one is to have a hobby, why not let it be dogs—good dogs."

That is the dog platform, so to speak, of Mrs. George S. Thomas of Hamilton, proud possessor of the best dog shown at the 1910 bench show of the New England Kennel Club, which has been chosen as Mechanics building.

It is not the fondness of her hobby, this statement of Mrs. Thomas. It is merely an explanation. She does not take the defensive attitude. Mercy she likes dogs, she is so situated that she can care for them very well here. Believing that if a thing is worth doing at all it is worth doing well, she tries to own the best dogs of their breed.

She has succeeded in this literally, for in little Endelffe Mite, a silky, black Pomeranian, she has the champion that won the best-dog-in-the-show prize. That is formidable fact for such a fluffy little bundle of hair as Endelffe Mite is, but the principle that lies at the base of the fact that count, Endelffe Mite is a grand specimen.

Plain Mite at Home.

Endelffe Mite is not called by that double title at the Thomas home in Hamilton. That's his professional name, so to speak. At home he is "Mite." But when he is entered in dog-show competition, the rules require a kennel name. So he is entered as "Endelffe Mite."

Among his friends as they say the dog's Pomeranian is just "Mite." The name fits him. He is under ten inches long and four or six inches round. These measurements are given work on account of the fluffy suff coat of black hair which envelops Mite from one end to the other. Getting exact dimensions of Mite, therefore, is like measuring a handful of feathers.

Mite weighs a bit over three pounds but he contains a ton of Pomeranian energy and brains. He is as keen as mustard and highly sensitive, like all blooded dogs. But he is not cranky, which is more than can be said of most prize-winners.

His course at the dog show was a succession of triumphs. From the first day, when he sat out on his downy, white pillow and gazed with interest at all comers, he was an object of admiring interest, especially to girls and women. All the feminine adjectives of praise were used up on Mite (from dog to dy).

Mite the Best of All.

When the judges got at his high-bred little form, they liked him, too. Mrs. Thomas had six other Pomeranians in the show but Mite was best of all. He took the blue in the "Pom" class. Then, when the winners were called out for the "best-dog-in-the-show" class, Mite was the best dog of all.

"Pressed? Of course, I am delighted," said Mrs. Thomas. "I knew Mite was a splendid fellow, though. He took first for 'Poms' at the New York bench-show. He now has won fourteen out of the fifteen points necessary to be a champion.

"His means that when Mite has captured one more championship point he will be known as Champion Endelffe Mite. At the rate he is now winning in his blue ribbon career he will soon be a champion. That is 'going some' for a dog only two years old.

"I think the world of Mite, of course," says Mrs. Thomas. "I would not put a money value on him. He cannot be bought. But if he were to be sold I should say that $1,000 would be the least possible price a dog fancier would think of offering for him.

Purchased Abroad.

"I became interested in dogs about nines years ago. Mr. Thomas and I travel a great deal. We have no children. I have plenty of time. I like dogs. They are my hobby. They take up the time for me which many women would spend in the nursery.

"First, I had Yorkshire terriers and a few sheep dogs. But I gave those up for the 'Poms.' The 'Poms' are much more hardy than any other kind of a toy dog. They are well protected from the cold. Mite can go out in the snow and cold for a half hour at a time and never get sick. Then, I can take personal care of the 'Poms' myself. When we had the sheep dogs we had to have a man to care for them.

"I never get tired of dogs, and never expect to. My husband and I spend about five months of the year abroad. We take in the dog shows and pick up the 'Poms.' I heard of Mite when I was abroad last year. He was exhibited in Brussels. I did not see him there, but I heard much about him when I got home. So I purchased him through an agent. He was sent over to me.

"Mite is the favorite of my seven 'Poms.' The dogs have a dog room all our home, Hamilton. Each dog has his place. Mite has the run of the house. He is privileged.

"He is a good dog, but particular. It bates music, for one thing. He fears a little clock chimes. We have little music in the dog room on account of the dogs. Once a hardy gurdy man played outside the house and the 'Poms' were frantic. Mr. Thomas gave the man a quarter to go away. We have company when the dogs need a send the dogs out of the house.

"Mite has won many prizes. So have the other dogs. I don't know how many prizes all our dogs have taken. Mite got his fifteenth championship point when he declared a champion, that will be equivalent to his defeating fifteen dogs of his breed.

"I shall exhibit Mite in Buffalo next week. Then he will have a rest from the bench shows till the long Island show later on. While Mrs. Thomas was talking, Mite was playing with her hand. The diminutive black canine has a wig as a full-grown cat, pawed at her hand and nonchalantly took one of her fingers in his tiny mouth as though he would bite it off.

But he gathers also that the jaws on the finger so gently that the needle-like teeth did not even prick the skin. Mite is a high-bred gentleman and would be rude to his mistress.

GIULIA MOROSINI MUST CUT EXPENSE

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The formal approval of the trustee's accounting upon the estate of Giovanni B. Morosini, the former millionaire banker, by Surrogate Cohalan discloses the fact that his daughter Giuli Morosini will be able to spend money more lavishly as she did during her father's life. It was her home then that at least $200,000 a year was necessary to buy her clothes. The banker's wealth is $1,700,000. Of this the widow will get the use of the interest on $1,360,000 and upon the residue of the estate. The residue being also divided between the total amount and the use of various trust funds for the other children.

KING CONFERS WITH ASQUITH ON LORDS' VETO

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A referendum vote on the question of restricting the veto power of the Lords was urged on the King by Premier Asquith as an extended conference today lasted hardly after he left Edward Asquith announced the cabinet had decided that actually urged the referendum as a plan that would greatly shorten and simplify the political crisis. His attitude is that the present dissolution election permitted to settle stand being taken by the people, who were confident by the House of Lords, not by refusing the budget and the powers of the Lords.

It was decided today that the Premier Mr. Morely will make a statement embodying the policy and the program of the cabinet in regard to the veto which will be laid before the King today and later took up with the cabinet after it is opened early in the Lords and the Parish recess of Parliament. In the opinion of the Premier the Unionists would not object to such a referendum, as they have been in opposition as well as of the Government only a direct popular vote would definitely solve this problem which has kept Parliament in a state of chaos. With either party taking strong demands the following of the veto which the Government has in a precarious situation. The revolt or dissaffection of the Labor Liberties and the progressive liberals has muddled the case so that the real demands of the majority are large have been to a great extent lost sight of.

TRUSTS OFFER TO PAY DEFICIT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Charles F. Brooker, Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut and millionaire business manufacturer, it is reported here, offered on behalf of coal corporations to take up the treasury deficit if the publicity feature of the corporation tax law was constituted.

The offer is said to have been made to President Taft and spurned by him.

Brooker is reported to have pointed out that other provisions of the law would give the Government all necessary information and that it would not be necessary to tear out corporation secrets.

CHINESE ANGRY AT PORT RULE

A hundred Chinese students at Harvard are indignant because the United States government has adopted a rule limiting the visas of Chinese students, merchants and tradesmen may enter the country. Under the new rule Chinese who might cross the border in Canada and enter the United States will be turned back.

Students intend to petition the Government to have the rule modified. Many of the students, it is said, are of the highest nobility, published by the Harvard Crimson, said today:

"For America to place our privileged former students on a restriction when her citizens in China enjoy all privileges is discriminating and unjust. Such an unfriendly act cannot be called to be in accordance with this principle."

SOUTH END BLOCK IN PERIL OF FIRE

The big four-story brick building at No. 21 Washington street, corner of Kneeland street, South End, was badly damaged by fire early today. The fire started in the rear of the first floor and burst through the walls and stairways to the floor above. The damage is estimated at about $1,000.

The two upper floors of the building and basement and first floor are occupied by the six small halls. Jacques & Melacon, tailors, occupy a section of the second floor, while the first floor is occupied by Paul & Co., Hardenbergh, grocers, and Washington Theatre. These drugs surfered a slight loss from smoke and water.

J. W. RICHARDS AT REST IN FOREST HILLS

The funeral services of J. W. Richards were held at the chapel of Forest Hill cemetery this afternoon. Episcopal service was conducted by the Rev. John W. Suter of Winchester. GUILD DEMANDS CHILD LABOR LAW

Former Governor Guild, in his publication, the Commercial Bulletin, today prints an editorial in which he calls attention to industrial transgressions which States permit against youth. He writes:

"We need, and we need badly, a National Child Labor law that will take the children out of the mills and put them into the public schools. The same test in every State of the Union."

GIRL DANCER'S OWN SKETCH OF SALOME DRESS WORN HERE

DANCER FIGHTS GOING TO JAIL

Sentenced to six months imprisonment in the house of correction for giving improper dancing exhibitions in Boston, Miss Jennie Pelletreau has appealed and was held under bonds for the grand jury. She claims that of these dances she wore a volume clothing.

Margaret Percival, who presided gaily as a model during the trial for the Government, said that Miss Pelletreau's costume consisted of "beveled girdle, a pair of bloomers, and then another pair of the same." Miss Pelletreau denies this. Many of herself in the costume she says she wore and this was handed to Judge Wentworth before she was sentenced.

CHINESE BUGS BACK OF 'COP' SHAKE UP

Two hundred roaches decimated, four water bugs decimal counts, and an unknown number of small, dark beetles were found by Mayor James J. Rich in the Lynn police headquarters inside that place a storm center of reform. He told Chief Thomas M. Burke to clean up and fired to the Charlie Center, the janitor. Then he got orders to put back Larry O'Connor, the janitor on the job.

Station 2 in West Lynn has been closed and Lieutenant George H. Pike sent to headquarters to only things there.

Sergeant Jon Brauf has been ordered to Station 2 and Sergeant Edward Hall has been ordered back to the previously old Policeman Dave Lee has a hospital here getting better from the hits.

Alderman Walter W. Pyne and William A. Atwell, police commissioner, helped the Mayor to shake things up.

GUILD HAS THE GRIP.

Ex-Governor Guild is confined to his home, No. 124 Marlboro street, to-day, with an attack of grip. MRS. GLOVER REFUSED TO SEE HER HUSBAND DYING FROM BULLET

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover showed no emotion or surprise when told that her husband had been fatally shot on the night of December 20 last, and when called to the morgue at 3 a.m. to identify the dead body she did not shed a tear when told that he was passing away, and refused to go to his bedside after she had been requested to do so twice by Dr. Nicholas W. Cousens.

That epitomized, is the remarkable testimony of Dr. Cousens as brought out at the contest of the Glover will in the East Cambridge Probate Court at yesterday's hearing. Dr. Cousens, under cross-examination, sometimes hesitatingly when the case is resumed on Monday.

Mrs. Glover has not been in the court room for two weeks and she is scheduled to be present at the hearing Monday. It would have been a most trying hour for her had she been in court yesterday and heard from the lips of the doctor who was present at the last moments of her husband and the picture he drew of herself.

Dying, Accused Hattie Le Blanc.

Dr. Cousens thought not that glover, would get well when he died, declared it was "a woman." Later, after three or more hypodermic injections of morphine had been used, he said that Hattie Le Blanc had him shot with a revolver.

It was brought out, however, that glover could not have seen who shot him, as his back was turned. Lawyer John J. Scott asked this question:

"So that when the pistol was fired, doctor, his back was to the person who fired the shot?"

"Yes, sir."

Then the doctor was asked as to whether it was light in the laundry and the doctor could not remember whether this question was asked or not. His impression was that the question was not asked.

Q. Do you recall whether he was asked whether he heard anybody else in the laundry besides Hattie? A. I didn't hear that question.

Q. Did he say that he did or did not hear anybody else in the laundry besides Hattie? A. I don't believe he said either. I don't think the question was asked.

Mrs. Glover Shed No Tears.

In his testimony as to the demeanor and actions of Mrs. Glover after he had called her to the hospital to see her dying husband, Dr. Cousens was asked if he spoke to her about going up to see him, and he said yes. The examination proceeded:

Q. How many times did you speak to her? A. I left her in the sitting room with Mr. Bigelow and told her to be very patient, and when I came down Mr. Mc-Kenna was going up and I said, "Mrs. Glover, your husband is in pretty low condition; you had better go up and see him."

Q. What did she say to that? A. She

OLD JAPAN AS SEEN BY BURTON HOLMES

Illustrated by stereopticon and motion pictures, Burton Holmes's lecture on old Japan as it is to-day was repeated this afternoon before a large audience by Miss Kramer at Tremont Temple. A glimpse of Fujiyama was followed by views of the Great Buddha, showing scenes of Japan along Asami railway. One of the most beautiful pictures shown was that of a conflagration showing the fire department of Tokyo, smaller to put out early fire bucket brigades.

EXETER PROBABLE WINNER OF BIG SCHOLASTIC MEET

HONEY MELLODY WINS AWARD OVER YOUNG JOHNSON

EXETER PICKED TO WIN THE CHAMPIONSHIP AT BIG SCHOOLBOY MEET

Exeter is slated to win the big annual indoor track championships at Mechanics building this afternoon and secure the first leg on the new five-year cup offered by the Boston Athletic Association.

There is only one thing that will hurt Exeter's chances of capturing the bulk of the points and running away with the big trophy. If Bingham, its star middle distance runner, is unable to compete the school will have to make a big effort to stave off Worcester Academy from winning out in the scramble for the tallies. Bingham won the 600-yard run last Winter and was picked as a sure thing this year and probably pulls also in the 1000-yard run. He has just recovered from a severe sickness and therefore may not be seen in the lists. His absence will make a big difference in the result of the New Hampshire prep schools meeting.

Outside of these two schools there will be nobody in the fight as Andover's team is not considered dangerous and the Boston schools are not supplied with sufficient allround material to figure prominently.

Exeter Has Sprinters.

It is in the track events Exeter expects to make its points by collecting all the places in the sprints, and with Bingham nail the scores in the middle distance runs on the program.

There is no sprinter in sight with the reputation of O'Hara, the Exeter flyer, and he is certainly in the 40-yard dash. His teammate, Burns, a Roxbury boy, is pushed down as a second place winner and Coomey or Captain Cornell will endeavor to annex it a clean sweep for Exeter.

Burns won the 300 last year for Exeter and unless something goes wrong will repeat as he is running in fine form. Cornell should be able to help Burns out in catching points. Captain O'Connor of Worcester Academy is the one to look out for if he competes. Hibben has made it doubtful that he will be in the battle. There are likewise entered to win the place in the 1000 yard dash and the best ones are Whitney of Noble and Greenough, Hosier and Jackson of Andover, Connell of Lowell, Strong of Boston College and Ryan of Lawrence.

Canary Mines of Malden High finished second in the 600-yard run last year, and is naturally looked as the one to win this year if Bingham fails to appear. The middle miners will be desperately fought for as some good boys will compete. There is Berns of Wakefield High, O'Brien of Roxbury, Goodrich of Noble and Greenough, Hosier and Jackson of Andover, Connell of Lowell, Strong of Boston College and Ryan of Lawrence.

Marceau a Winner.

The result of the 1,000-yard run is an open question. Burke, the Wakefield flyer, is liked the best, and Sadler of Hopkinton is looked upon as a dark horse.

PROBABLE WINNERS AT BIG SCHOOL MEET

40-yard dash...O'Hara, Exeter
300-yard dash...Burns, Exeter
600-yard run...Bingham, Exeter
1,000-yard run...Burke, Wakefield
Mile run.....Marceau, Quincy
High jump...Chandler, Brookline
Shot put.....Bartlett, Worcester

Mann of Worcester is another that must be considered in. The distribution of points is a problem, but the outsiders are likely to wedge themselves into the choice positions.

The mile run is as good as won, with Frank Marceau, the star Quincy High and B. A. A. runner in this event. The record for the distance is looked for from him. The other prizes look good, as Marceau should win by a large margin. Allen of English High, Sadler of Mechanic Arts, Dougherty of Exeter, Clune and Dufresne of Andover, will be in the race.

The forty-five-yard hurdles will prove another interesting event, as Newton High is the only former point winner competing. Stone has a good hurdler in Barth, while Worcester will send a couple in Woodin and Mitchell.

Worcester Academy has the call in the shot-put with the giant Bartlett, the only Yankee going better than 40 feet. Worcester anticipates adding to the total largely here, and get all the points with Howard and Whitney to aid Bartlett.

Chandler in High Jump.

There are no high jumpers who can outleap Chandler, the Brookline crack. He holds the record of 5 feet 10.38 inches made last year. Bartlett of Worcester may give him a rub, but Chandler has a fine team mate in Johnson to travel along with him.

There will be seventeen relay races, Springfield and Hartford High schools having notified Mr. Brown that they would not compete. The relay races are as follows:

Roxbury Latin vs. Newton High, Lynn English High vs. Medford High, Stone vs. Westbrook Seminary, Chelsea High vs. Revere High, Noble & Greenough vs. Wentworth, Rindge Man. Tr. S. vs. Cambridge Latin, Lowell High vs. Providence Textile High, St. Andrew's vs. Lynn Classical High, Worcester Academy vs. Brookline High, Melrose High vs. Rugby, Manchester High, Lowell Textile vs. Cushing Academy, Volkmann Middy vs. Roxbury Latin Midgets, English High vs. Boston Latin, Dedham High vs. Newton High, Quincy High vs. Powder Point, Malden High vs. Boston College High, Andover Academy vs. Exeter Academy.

MELLODY WINS OVER YOUNG JACK JOHNSON

BROCKTON, Feb. 26.—Honey Mellody of Charlestown showed something of his oldtime form in his twelve-round mill with Young Jack Johnson, the Boston brunette, before the Union A. C., winning the decision by a mile. There were 600 present, including many from Boston to cheer Mellody, and the decision was a popular one, Mellody appearing to be a big favorite.

Before the match it was said that he was going back and that he had lost his punch. But after a few rounds in the ring scrapping with this contention, for in the eleventh and twelveth rounds it was Mellody who did the leading. Mellody who forced Johnson to give ground and take severe punishment, and the round up fresh and with wind to spare. A match with Tommy Gilfoil, the Boston welterweight, has been suggested as the next event for Mellody.

He had pretty much the better of the argument all through in the bout, setting the pace for the first six rounds as well as the finish, although it was game, however, and took punishment without flinching. The seventh and eighth rounds were the two in which Johnson showed good form.

Teddy Murphy of Randolph and Frank Delaney of Boston went six rounds to a draw in a preliminary. Young Whitney of Rockland, who said he is a cousin, stopped Young Ashport of Brockton in two rounds.

FRANKIE NEIL BADLY BEATEN

BALTIMORE, Feb. 26.—For the second time in so many nights, Frankie Neil received an awful drubbing at the hands of his opponent. Joe Attell did the work two nights ago and then Willie Jones handed the Californian the beting before the Eureka A. C. Tonight Neil was scheduled to go fifteen rounds, but Neil was so battered up that the referee called a halt in the thirteenth round.

It was Attell's fight from the first tap of the gong, every round being in the Brooklyn's favor. Neil came out terribly punished in the face and body and on several occasions it looked as if Frankie was all in, but he came back for more. He was sent to the canvas three times for the count and the twelfth round he said was only saved by the bell.

In the thirteenth Neil was forced twice and was hanging on the ropes hardly able to stand when the Brooklynite was declared. Jones was strong at the finish. The only men to showed of the battle was an intermission under his left eye.

PIRATES SHIFT SCHEDULE TO CLOSE EARLY

PITTSBURG, Feb. 26.—The Pittsburg and Cincinnati teams of the National League have completed an agreement by which they will close their season on October 8 and 9, respectively, next Fall, instead of October 15, as laid down in the schedule adopted recently in New York. October 9 is the day upon which the American League will close. Both Dreyfuss and Herrmann have agreed on a plan under Article 1 Section 47 in the constitution, which reads as follows:

"Cincinnati and Pittsburg have completed arrangements to move forward our games scheduled for October 12, 13 and 15, so as to furnish one or more our season in Pittsburg October 8 and in Cincinnati October 9. There will be no trouble about it. Mr. Herrmann thinks the same about it as do. I have drawn up the agreement and have sent it to him to sign, and the new dates will go in his signature, become part of the original schedule."

According to the arrangement planned the games scheduled at Pittsburg for August 25 will be played June 29 and July 1 and the games scheduled at Cincinnati for October 12 will be played September 7.

WHITE SOX GET AWAY TO TRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Cheered on by an army of loyal bugs, the White Sox party, seventy strong, headed by President Comiskey and officials chaperoned by President Ban Johnson of the American League, steamed out of the LaSalle depot westward bound, on the third annual training jaunt to California.

Six games have been arranged for the Sox duels at Frisco, with the opening game set for next Friday. The second squad will be in charge of Secretary Frank Hicks, with "Doc" White attending to the managerial duties. The pitchers will be White, Young, Hollis and Scheible; the catchers, Ryan, Payne, Krueger and Sullivan; at first base will be Gill and Mullen, at second base Shaw, at short Weaver, at third Mowrey, at short Parent, in left field Barrows, in right field Hahn, and in centre field Cole.

ARLINGTON IS ICE CHAMPION

Arlington High won undisputed claim to the hockey championship of this section of the State by defeating Milton Academy at Milton pond, 4 to 1. Milton had previously lost one match that to Melrose, and had beaten St. Mark's, the only team with a win over Arlington, so that yesterday's result gives Arlington the title.

ELI WRESTLER AGAINST TIGER

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 26.—Two of the best-known football players in America will wrestle to-night, when Eddie Hart of Princeton and Pat Dunigan of Yale, both in the heavyweight class, who played football in harness last fall, and Yale has protested against Hart playing against the Ells next fall for four his work in the game here.

Hart's showing will settle the question whether he be allowed to play against Yale next fall or not.

Boxing Bouts

LEWISTON, Me., Feb. 26.—Before the Armory Athletic Club at City Hall Gus Larrabee of Lewiston and Al Limerick of Haverhill, Mass., fought six hotly contested rounds to a draw. In the semi-final Limerick handed a hard left on Limerick's chin which floored him. Limerick showed much cleverness in avoiding Larrabee's hard swings, his fast foot work being especially noticeable.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 26.—Dave Deshler is the fine shape to battle Frank Pieters, the coast lightweight, for the title. The winner will likely be matched with Ad Wolgast for the lightweight championship.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Referee Dolter called the six-round bout between Tom Tighe, champion welterweight of the United States navy, and Sandy Williams of New York at Lewisville a draw and on the fifth round because Williams' head was cut and bleeding so badly that the rest of the footlights when he was knocked over the ropes.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Tommy Coleman beat Billy Leahy at the Nonpareil Club in six rounds. Mike Fleming beat Hughey O'Brien after six hard rounds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—Louis Bloemer was awarded a fight newspaper and that Sam Langford and Jim Barry would meet in San Francisco March 31.

LOWELL, Feb. 26.—Honey Mellody and Jimmy Moriarty were matched to spar a twelve-round bout at the Lowell A. C. meeting of the Gladstone A. C. in Lowell.

HARVARD GYM TEAM BEATS AMHERST

The Harvard gymnasium team defeated Amherst in the Hemenway gymnasium last night by the score of 43 to 17. Coryell, acting captain for Harvard, was the star of the meet, winning 18 points, the largest individual score. First place counted five, second three, and third one.

HOPPE IS THE GREAT MASTER, SAYS PARTNER

By ED COGSWELL.

Willie Hoppe and Ora Morningstar are at Point Richmond. They will arrive to-morrow a week from Monday so that Hoppe may have two days' solid practice before his match with George Sutton, March 6, for the 18.2 balk-line championship of the world.

Both of the cue stars long to be in every collection complete the fact that they hate been making quick jumps from town to town.

"While is playing marvelous billiards, Morningstar cries. "There simply is no stopping him. Since we began this jolly tour I have beaten him exactly once. At that I have been playing first-class billiards, for when I go to an average of thirty he goes to forty. He always manages to go better than I do, even if I play at championship speed. Once I went fifty and, to my utter amazement, he went seventy-five.

"He is, in my estimation, the greatest master of billiards and will be for many years to come."

Hoppe was modesty of the form he has been displaying on the road and smiled broadly when he heard his partner's comments among the players and the many spectators. But all can get a glimpse of the emblems.

Go to San Francisco.

The great team has been secured to defend Wright of San Francisco for a match of three nights on the coast at the former champion's new room there, the match to be one chosen of the recent Pittsburg match. They will play three nights, starting March 27. This will give Hoppe a chance to rest in the middle of the season match.

Efforts to secure a New York firm are almost completed a competition which will take the form of forty for billiard balls, and there has been consideration in the proposed over the announcement.

"Any say there is little chance of securing a match with Sutton, while others hold out a contrary contention, but all agree it would be a good thing for the game. Apropos of the discussion is related an incident which occurred many years ago when two champions were being taken toward the same end.

In 1865 Michael Phelan, perhaps the best known follower of the game who ever lived, put up $1,000 and challenged New York bank to be given to the person who could put up an equivalent. John B. Sutton took the place of Ivory. As a result he was the recipient of more kinds of billiard balls than you would imagine could be made and they came from all parts of the country.

Balls Sent to Boston.

Mr. Phelan sent a set of these balls to Boston, which he said looked pretty good, and asked Billy Marsnall to try them. He put them on one of the tables one night when there was a crowd in the room, and they went along pretty good until one bounced off the table and hit the head of a man, which was in the hardwood floor.

Say, if it had been at the present time it would have created a panic, because it behaved just like a bomb. There was a report, a puff of smoke and a blaze, and when the excitement ended there was a little charred mass left in some of what had once been a billiard ball.

With one week's play in, Jodge has done the best work in the class B tournament at Moses Taylor's office and studio, his average being 3.6.65 per cent., and high run of twenty points. It is very interesting when Judge Hoppe in his humble way tells how he made his extended silent conversations with himself as to how he will play the next shot.

Judge is very particular not to overlook a bet in hitting the ball at the proper degree of angle that will produce results, and when he gets into a discussion with himself as to the best way to shoot, the second roll into the pocket unheeded till the argument is settled.

Through the efforts of Franklin, the confidence of the class A tournament at 123 Sulaine's Hon. Hilliard Palmer was banned from this week till next, all of the contestants agreeing a short campaign quite to be sure.

Lew Curtis of the Imperial says he has received a letter from Charles Temos, Hoppe's manager, saying that right after the latter part of next month Hoppe will be playing exhibitions with Morningstar this side of the Mississippi River, which means that his stay in California is to be short. Curtis is planning to have them both for a week at the Imperial before the close of the season.

Minh Murray is figuring out an attraction for his White Star billiard room, that will take the fans by surprise, so it is reported. It concerns a ten-inch ivory ball and will be decided likely in April.

GRAY HAIR BY BASEBALL BLOW

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—It's pretty tough sledding to be a guy Lobardo one day, go to sleep and wake up and find one's self a veritable Rip Van Winkle.

That was the experience of Owen Wallace of the Independents club in the "way back days of 1881. Watty was playing with Indianapolis and accompanied the team to Cincinnati. Shullis was pitching for the Reds and he let fly with one of his compatriotic offerings with Watkins at the bat. Watty tried to endure the ball, but it struck him full in the head and he dropped like a log.

It was not until four days later that Wallace regained consciousness. His skull had been fractured and he was confined to his bed for many weeks. His life was also spared of as first, but his excellent physique and good nursing carried him over the danger line.

Watty could not believe his eyes when he first caught a glimpse of himself in a mirror. He look gray. He made inquiries and learned from his doctors that the shock had caused his hair to turn gray the first night. He was left in ignorance of this fact until he was well on the road to recovery.

That accident put an end to Watkins's career as a player, but he has been connected with the game in some capacity or other for the succeeding years. Although he is only fifty-five years old now his hair is as white as new-fallen snow.

BIG SOUTH BOSTON SPORTS ON MARCH 17

A varied program of athletic sports will form a feature of the celebration of the 134th anniversary of the evacuation of Boston in the peninsular district, March 17. EDDIE MENARD TO QUIT POLO

BROCKTON, Feb. 26.—It has been learned here that Eddie Menard is to quit playing polo. It has been in the game thirty years and this season was still in the saddle. He is to become proprietor of a restaurant in Providence.

Menard began his polo career with the Oswegos of East Boston in the Fall of 1880. The next season he joined the famous Paris team of East Boston, on which the great Jimmy Seig was a mate. In 1883 he played with the Big Nine team of Charlestown. In 1884 he joined with Brockton, then went to New Bedford. Next he played with the Somerville team and in 1885 rejoined Brockton. Later Menard played with Lowell, Somerville and Lynn, and still later in the West, starting last two years ago.

OLD DOPING STORY OF FAR SOUTH RETOLD

Doping horses has always been a subject of great interest to race followers, and we expect to hear some wild tales from across the border. This is not an aspersion on racing in foreign parts, but merely the wedge for slipping in the story John Bright used to tell of doping horses in South America.

It seems, according to the story, that in certain parts of South America there grows a marvelous plant. The juice of this plant is the most invigorating drug known. This was compounded with other drugs by a skilful owner, and the result was a wonderful horse dope.

Owner Was Lucky.

"Now," said Bright, "this owner was mighty lucky naturally. He had a stable of horses worth little or nothing, but he would take one of them, train it and send it in the pool selling with glove, and that horse would go out and make a lot of stake horses look dizzy.

"A lot of people were suspicious, but nobody could find out what the dope was or how it was used. It fell on those that I have heard that owner say that he could dope a horse so that it would run itself to death, and yet a postmortem would not show a trace of any drug whatever. He looked as if it was going to be a pretty sick Winter for him.

"The Indians had been trying to find some way to discover that dope, and finally they did so. One day just before the first race I noticed the judge opened a little box into the wall to blow. The owner, who was under suspicion, had a good thing on the first race; he didn't want to have a chance on paper, but there had been a lot of play on it and every one was suspicious, especially a lot of bookmakers who had been trimmed repeatedly.

Dope Killed Frog.

"The horse won all right but when the boy dismounted the judge was out of his box and down on the track. Special police men held the infuriated owner back while the judge got a syringe full of foam from the horse's mouth. Then he opened the little box he had; there was a frog in it. He injected the foam into the frog and the frog jumped itself to death in about ten seconds.

"That was proof enough of the doping for the man who had been doping money to the owner for days. They went for him and would have strung him up, too, if it had not been at the big little bottle of dope in his pocket. He drank it and got away with a few sprinkle record, had he been fined across the track.

STRAIGHT DOPE

FOR SPORT FANS

THREE BOSTON BOXERS HAVE rough jobs on their hands Tuesday night when they tackle three boys from Philadelphia at the Armory A. A., and the man who can pick the card can win himself some vacation money. This is the second time in the past year that local patrons of the game have had a chance to see the Quaker City ravaged against Boustown in an all-star show. The other time was several months ago, when the three Moore boys, Pal Frankie and Reddy, boxed Eddie Carr, Johnny Lynch and Eddie Murphy at the National Club in South Boston. That card was arranged by Johnny Mooney, but his effort for Tuesday promises to be a lot better, as Tommy O'Keefe and Willie Moody are classier boys than Pal's two brothers.

It looks like the best card of the season, and should provide an exciting carnival full of action. Chief interest attaches to the Belmont Moore bout, and the local boy will make a valiant attempt to stop the winning streak of the Philadelphia demons.

Tommy O'Keefe made a decided hit with local fans when he defeated Kid Goodman here several weeks ago. This time he tackles Eddie Murphy of South Boston. Willie Moody has shown to advantage against Mattie Baldwin and Dave Deshler.

Belmont and Moore met in New York a couple of weeks ago, Moore getting a newspaper decision. Belmont says he will reverse it this time.

TO SEVERAL INQUIRERS: THE NELson-Wolgast fight goes on record as a knockout for Wolgast. It is not necessary for a boxer to be knocked unconscious to be "knocked out."

C. A. SCARREY, CHARLESTOWN: Don't blame me for standing up for John L. If he helped you to get on your feet when you were down and out. It shows the proper spirit and I'll even forgive you for abusing me. You're all right old man, so far as your end of it is concerned, but you mustn't drag others the right to thing for themselves.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Would like to have you answer this bet: Jeffries could whip Johnson if he was sick and sober. All next highest cost is a quarter. Thanking you in advance, I am,
A READER OF THE AMERICAN.
When you bring both the boys running at us now it counts the same as any other race. It's king beats A's queen, so it wins.

Would also like a list of last year's Notre Dames to send address to it. H. Hazel, Manager Wakefield Baseball Association.

THERE has been a lot of talk about Jimmy Walsh not being able to make the bantam weight, and a lot of the New York sport writers have been out to put the weight as high as 125 pounds. Eddie Kevlin, Walsh's manager, has always insisted that he could get Jimmy down to the way name from Pittsburg the other day that he stepped over in New York long enough to settle matters, as the following telegram will show.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Jimmy Walsh weighed in at the Winning Jockey club to-day that he can make 116 pounds. He tipped the beam at 115 pounds, 14 ounces, but the three extra pounds which could be taken off. Tom Jones refuses to match Walsh until he looks for bantamweight mark. This proves it. Walsh is now after Pal Moore and will try Moore make any weight.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Boxing News in Brief Form

Tony Hicken went a creek at Frankie Burns at the Boston limit.

Hollis has won twenty-seven fights, twenty of them with knockouts, so he would be a mighty tough customer for the Sailor.

Joe Hollis is still trying to let Sailor Burke know that he has a customer if he wants to fight. Hollis says he talked with the tar, and says he knows just how to lick him.

It is estimated that the gross receipts of the Jeffries-Johnson contest were $250,000. The big fellow gets a fat share of this, as he will split up with the theatre holdings near Los Angeles.

Fighting Kennedy says he has been promised a match with the winner of the Cross-Mario fight.

Tommy Stagg, who has fought Joe Hyland, Frankie Mango, Jeff O'Connell, Tony Sione and George Hoey, wants a chance at Pal Moore and Knockout Brown.

The day is coming when a sporting editor will have to be able to do dramatics and be an expert on music. Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champ, threatens to enter grand opera. Imagine Jeff doing the balcony scene from "Il Trovatore" or Jack Johnson as Uncle Tom!

In selecting San Francisco as the battleground for the Jeffries-Johnson fight the promoters have uncovered an interesting point. The license to hold the fight will be issued by the organization called the Broadway A. C., of which Sam Fitzpatrick is the matchmaker and manager. It is said that the bakers of the club are Jack Gleason, J. W. Coffroth and Tex Rickard, with Eddie Graney having a silee because of his political pull; but it is also stated that the police authorities, headed by John L. Berger, County Sheriff, have compelled the promoters to take care of Fitzpatrick.

It will be recalled that Fitzpatrick practically made Jack Johnson. He supplied many a dollar when the big negro was fat and broke, and then the sheriff stepped in to corner Tommy Burns, Fitzpatrick actually borrowed the money from debtors to Johnson, where he subsequently negotiated a loan to make the trip to Australia.

Without Fitzpatrick's assistance Johnson probably would not have had a crack at Burns, so that the present holder of the championship of the world he was expected to more than repay his manager. But Fitzpatrick has thrown down hard and had to borrow more money to get back to San Francisco.

Dougherty is still trying to induce Sailor Burke to come through and make a match with Joe Hollis, but has little hope of getting the tar to see things the right way. The veteran manager thinks Hollis put the fear of his wallop in Burke when he won in a punch the other evening.

Mr. A. Cackling writes: "I would like to get hold of a boxer about 120 pounds." What his further intentions are he didn't say.

PAPKE SLUGS INNOCENT MAN AT A BENEFIT

Billy Papke, one of the chief American candidates for the middleweight championship, is in trouble in Paris, France, where he went some weeks ago for the purpose of filling three engagements, the first of which was to be a bout with the winner of Eddie Lewis-Harry Lewis contest.

Papke smashed Dan McKetrick, Willie Lewis's manager, a heavy blow in the mouth with his first and a benefit given the flood sufferers by the Americans in Paris the other night. He knocked McKetrick, who is a small man, senseless and it was thirty minutes before they could bring him to. As Dan is popular in Paris and Papke a stranger the Frenchmen were deeply incensed and it is possible that Papke will lose all of his French prospects.

This news is sent here in a letter from Al Lippe, Abe Attell's manager, now in Paris, under date of the 11th. He says that the result of the second Papke-McKetrick go, following without provocation and entirely unexpected. This is what Lippe, who is a man of fairness, says of the matter:

"Papke is very well here and the Frenchmen will hardly forgive him for his passing on Dan McKetrick the night of the American benefit to the flood sufferers. There was a big crowd present and Dan was slowing for the Johnson-Ketchel fight pictures, which he has in France. He turned to meet Ketchel or Papke. I answered, Ketchel, of course, and with that Papke struck Dan a heavy blow in the mouth, knocking him down and senseless.

"Papke thought McKetrick was making fight of him, although it was I that said 'Ketchel' in answer to his question. The blow would have knocked Johnson out and they had to take four stitches in Dan's mouth after they got him to his senses.

"It is impossible to tell at this time what the promoters will do about it, but there is a big outcry against Papke and he may be forced to go away from here without fighting. The people say they do not want that kind in their city, and Mr. Pratt, one of the leading boxing men here and a great friend of the American boys, is said to be going to send to the club and asked that Papke's engagement be cancelled. Papke hasn't been seen since, although I heard that he ducked out into a quiet place in the suburbs.

"Al Kaufax and Sam McVea box on Feb. 26, and Jim Stewart and Ingo the week following. The game is good here right now and all of the boys have money.

"They are opening the game in Monte Carlo and Harry Lewis boxes Charley Hitle there within two weeks."

REVERE ALUMNI TO PLAY BOYLSTON

The Revere High Alumni will play the fast Boylston five at High school gymnasium, Revere, Saturday night.

A large delegation will come down to root for the Boylston five, and the Revere team will fight their hardest for a large crowd.

Both teams are composed of ex-High school stars, who claim they still possess their old-time basketball form.

AMATEUR BOXING ENTRIES CLOSE

The entries for the amateur tournament of the B. A. A. next Wednesday and Saturday nights, close to-night. As Manager George Brown intends to match the more experienced boxers in special bouts, it will give the amateurs who have not competed a good chance to get a good ring-coat. Gold and silver watches will be given to each class.

Baseball News and Notes.

In old days a baseball manager took a vacation in his home for the rest of the Winter. Nowadays you find them in a suite in a skyscraper dictating letters with the energy of a fresh president.

Eddie Plank signed a contract with the Athletics and before the ink was dry announced himself in great shape and predicted that he would have one of the best years of his life.

Ban Johnson may well be dubbed the Czar of baseball. With a "twenty years" contract at $25,000 per, the head of the American League need worry no more over the question of advancing cost of living.

The Western League, like the National, is also drifting against itself in the matter of adopting a schedule. There is a tendency among the club owners to adopt the regulation 154 game card, but a vigorous minority is in favor of playing 168 games.

A lot of mighty funny things happen in baseball. Last year and the year before it was said that Larry Doyle, the Giant second baseman, was a great natural ball player, but lacked a baseball head. Now he is being mentioned as a field leader of the New Yorkers.

Bozeman went to pieces at the initial sack when Ira Thomas tipped off to the Senators that he preferred to bunting thrown around the bags. Jennings at once traded Bozeman for Dodger to Maier for Foxy Jones. Bozeman tried the outfield in St. Louis, but proved a frost according to Mc-Aleer. Bozeman still maintains he not not been a fair trial to make good at the position.

Byron Bancroft Johnson, the big mogul of the American League, frowns upon the proposed series of fall baseball games for the major leagues from the minor organizations.

Bud Sharpe, the Pittsburg first base recruit, is a graduate of State College. The Nationals got him from college in 1904 and tried him out for a month. He played the initial bag for Newark last year.

Another name must be added to the already large list of Sox players who are famous. The latest addition is Artie Kruger, the fly chaser and pinch hitter of Columbus Club and a hot candidate for the Sox outfield job.

Jack Ryan, manager of Jersey City, says he believes that Russell Ford will be the pitching sensation of the American League this season. "He has everything, including a spitter and the best fork ball I ever handled. And he will not have to use the spitter unless he wants to, either, to make good in any league."

Tom Jones, the Detroit first sacker, will have a rival in Shumsher, who plays first base for the Rochester team in the Eastern League and batted .290. McGraw had the following fellow in mind when he turned him loose because he was too heavy. Shumsher played the season under John Gaunel, former manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Claude Rossman, the big first baseman who kicked himself out of the Boston league by refusing to play the bag for Jimmy McAleer, is going to have a big year with Jersey City, according to reports. Rossman is also credited with having a tendency among the club owners to adopt the regulation 154 game card, but a vigorous minority is in favor of playing 168 games.

For the first time since he has been associated with the game, President Frank Farrell of the Highlanders will this year make the trip South. Mr. Farrell purposes going to Athens about March 10 and will be back in time for the opening.

A number of the Cleveland Naps are at Hot Springs. The journey to Alexandria, La., will be made in a week or ten days. Mg Clarke, the catcher, who was supposed to report early with the battery men, is still missing.

Rank congation and Bill Hinchman will be rivals for a regular outfield job on the Columbus club this season. Hinchman has not signed. His contract was sent to Ormand, Fla., where he is wintering.

Baseball meetings at least did some good They silenced Jeffries and Johnson temporarily.

Horace Fogel's staunchest friend in that $18,000 controversy with William Murray was the schedule.

James McAleer showed mixed feelings when Ban Johnson told him that he hoped Washington would win a pennant before his (Johnson's) team expired.

The society for the Prevention of Unnecessary Noises in New York was asleep last week.

C. H. Ebbetts's plan to make National League ball teams play two games every afternoon is under the sod tastefully decorated with immortelles.

GIANTS PLAY TWO TEXAS TEAMS TO-DAY

MARLIN, Tex., Feb. 26.—The New York Nationals had their last workout before opening the exhibition season at Dallas and Fort Worth to-day. McGraw put the team into a fast game. The only kick was on the part of the pitchers, who were not allowed to put men on strike outs. The batter was not allowed to take a base on balls or be struck outs. He had to stand at the plate until he hit a fair ball.

Raymond was pitching for Matty's team and the McGraw players pounded him hard for five innings. At the finish there was a drizzle over the game, and after a heated discussion it was finally decided that McGraw's team had won by 4 to 3 and that Raymond had been beaten.

Wilson, Scott, Bell and Rucker all pitched and showed very good form for this time of year, and it is likely that they will be given a chance against Dallas and Fort Worth. When the practice was over McGraw gathered twenty-three of the young players to get ready to start for Dallas. The men left behind were Robinson, who is suffering from a sprained foot; Meyers and one or two of the young pitchers.

When the team arrives at Dallas it will split up, and Matty Fenna will go to Fort Worth, while the McGraw team will play in Dallas.

Ernest Losh gave McGraw an idea that he might make the team when he clustered up with a two-base drive that cleared the Mattinon a victory. Losh is very fast on the bases, and during the last two days he has been hitting the ball hard and often.

Mathewson is in excellent condition and the stiffness has gone from his arm to such a degree that he expects to pitch part of the game against Fort Worth.

RESULT MUST GO AS KNOCKOUT FOR AD

Since the Nelson-Wolgast championship battle at San Francisco dozens of cases have been received as to whether Wolgast would be credited with a knockout. Few of the boxing followers who had wagers on the result of the contest it can be said that the fight will go down in the records as a draw. The best opinion is borne out by Eddie Smith of Oakland, Cal., who refereed the battle.

"Nelson gamely fighting on to the inevitable knockout. Wolgast was very wary and had no chance to win. It must be recorded as a knockout," says Smith.

Manicure Lady Paves Way for an Easter Hat

"JUST think, George," said the Manicure Lady, "it will be Easter before we know it!"

"Oh, I suppose so," said the Head Barber, tearing a freshly-baked bride on his thumb.

"Honest, I wish you wouldn't do that, George. It makes me nervous. How often have I gotta ask you?" exclaimed the Manicure Lady.

"I suppose you are afraid I'll cut myself," smiled George.

"I don't care if you cut yourself or not," said the Manicure Lady, "because it would be your own fault. It ain't because it's your thumb; it's the feeling I get when I see a razor touching flesh. It must be awful to see one of them colored persons getting busy at a darky ball.

"But, as I was saying, Easter will be on us girls before we know it."

"And the hats will be on us men," said the Head Barber. "I wish it was all over. The wife has been mighty tender and considerate the last week or so, and I was just wondering what legal holiday was coming.

"Fishing for an Easter Lid"

"First off, I thought maybe that it might be Washington's Birthday, but that didn't seem right, because I never buy her anything on Washington's Birthday. I can't afford a cherry tree and I wouldn't trust her with a hatchet since I have joined the lodge and get home late. So I suppose it must be Easter. She's doting for a Easter lid."

"Be good to her, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Bless her heart, she is your wife, and, you know how women likes them little things like Easter hats and diamonds to make them look pretty. I think if a woman is patient enough to stand for a man, with all his faults, he ought to be generous enough to klek in with a little gift of some kind most every week. Get her a hat, George."

"I suppose I gotta," said George. "But they cost awful, and with the cost of living the way it is now, I don't know how to frame it up. I'll see."

"I'm going to have a swell thatch," said the Manicure Lady, "one of them Chanticleer things that is all the rage in Paris just now. The milliner ordered the rooster yesterday, a lovely Plymouth Rock. And the frame is going to be great, one of them white straw shapes with black velvet on the under side, and a sheaf of wheat and a ear of corn right in front of the rooster.

Sister Mayme Wants a Hen

"Sister Mayme is going to get one, too, but she thinks she wants a hen on the hat instead of a rooster. The milliner told her she could get a hen cheaper, and Mayme is that economical there is no stopping her into being a spender."

"What is all this Chanticleer stuff about, anyway?" asked the Head Barber.

"I don't know much about it myself, George," said the Manicure Lady. "It's some fellow over in Paris that wrote a play about a rooster, and the name of the rooster is Chanticleer; that's all I know. Brother Wilfred says that the play is great. He built seen it, of course, but a man that wrote it is a poet, and ever since Wilfred had that poem accepted by the Floor and Feed Courier, he's been daffy about poets and poetry.

"Wilfred says that the man which wrote Chanticleer is named Rostand, the same gent that wrote Cyrano de Bergerac, or whatever you call that play Mister Mansfield used to play. Wilfred is working on a burlesque of Chanticleer now. He is writing all the words and his friend that works in the freight department down at the South Terminal Building is writing the music.

"I think it's awful clever, as far as they have got, one of the situations is grand. An old fellahman comes into his storey, and there is a big rooster. Then it goes like this:

IRISHMAN:
"Why are you here, why are you here?

ROOSTER:
'I'm Chanticleer, I'm Chanticleer'

IRISHMAN:
'Then I shall kick you out of here,
I've got to keep my shanty clear.'

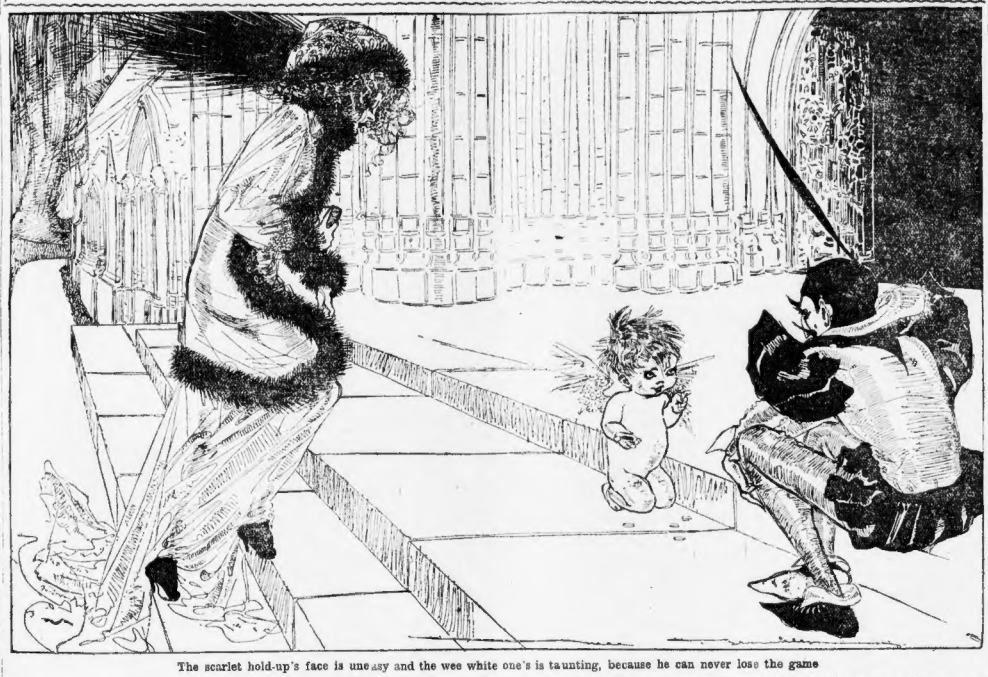
"I don't see much to that," said the dubious Head Barber.

"Don't you get the gag, George? Chanticleer and 'shanty clear'?"

"Rats!" said the Head Barber.

"Heads I Win, Tails You Lose"---By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner



The scarlet hold-up's face is uneasy and the wee white one's is taunting, because he can never lose the game

LENTEN DAYS now when Pan's just writhing in, stretching and yawning under the roots and the sod, feeling sleepily for his pipe and listening to the swift, scurrying patter of the rain on the thin, green grass and the strange, unaccountable sounds and stirrings of waking things, like the moving of yeast bubbles, two great and famous and wicked road agents, rangers of the world's great highways, workers in the same debonair calling, and friendly enemies steal into the city and foregather on the cold, hushed gray steps of a church within sound of the mellow organ tones and have a quiet little game of flipping coins for the souls of the pretty demoiselles who go by them up and down.

And the scarlet holdup's face is always uneasy and the wee white one's is taunting and his lids droop jeeringly, for he has the devil's own luck!

"Heads I win, tails you lose," he sings out while he nurses the coin in his waggling rose-bud fist.

And the coin hurtles into the soft Spring air—and most times comes down with the Grecian lady turned to the sky.

But even while it doesn't, if the white holdup has drawn a miner's ring around some base lass as she tip-toed by and into the dark, fragrant, holy place he falls upon the nickel and scrambles it up before the devil has had a keek at it.

He's a rare one, he is, and as long as you must be caught by one or the other of the rogues, when you come sauntering out again, why not linger around on the broad gray steps and have a long look at the famous ones for this once? For in Lenten season they're bold and they come down out of the hills.

The reckless victims that usually walk abroad so careless like suddenly have waxed wary and the great hunters have had to track them to their caves and sit on their trail. And they get 'em coming and going!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Why Should the Man Take the First Steps?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHY Is it that in a quarrel between man and girl, the former should always be expected to take the first step toward reconciliation?

I am not criticising the situation. I simply put the query: Why is it?

It must be that generations of physical superiority have placed him in the position of always taking the lead.

The girl may be to blame in a quarrel and anxious to acknowledge the fault, but does not dare to do so, for fear people will think she is running after the man.

Since time began the man has had the privilege of seeking his mate and yet, in early days, the woman did as much toward the support of the family as did her lord and master.

When our ancestors lived in caves and trees the women worked as hard as the men, but they must remain "courted" or "treed" until some grand gentleman clothed in fur deigned to beckon them from their coy retreat.

It seems a perfectly fair arrangement that when a man expects to support his wife for the rest of his days he should have the privilege of selecting her. What is not fair is that he should apparently have such wide and deliberate choice in the selection.

Takes His Time Picking a Wife

It is intolerable that a woman's entire world should watch the game and speculate as to whether or not he is going to ask her.

Just as a man tries a dozen motors before purchasing, so does he pay marked attention to a dozen girls before he finally decides which one he wants to marry.

I would only advocate woman's proposing, because it would take years of liberty before she would come to her senses and make her choice in a sane and rational manner. But I do think that men has assumed more liberty in the matter of his attentions to girls than he has any right to.

He should be made to think before he takes up a girl's entire time and keeps other men out of the field. When he is even casually attentive, he demands that she has eyes for him only. She is on probation, so to speak.

If things were on a natural basis, a girl should not be to know her liking for a man frankly and modestly without the world accusing her of pursuing him.

As it is she cannot enjoy a friendliness with a man without being considered in love with him. If she has a failing out with him she feels a forward minx, if she takes the first step toward reconciliation.

One Great Privilege Lacking

Woman has many privileges, but they are all privileges that man does not want, and among them that of equality is conspicuously lacking.

"You are all that is desirable and I love and honor you," says man, and he selects you are put, my dear, and wait until you are asked."

The most aggravating thing about man is that he feels so chary of himself—his conceit, where woman is concerned, is colossal. Time and woman herself are largely to blame for it.

For centuries he has been given free rein and woman has meekly accepted the situation.

A woman does not want to do the seeking—she prefers to be sought—but she would like to have much credit taken for granted.

At present she is like a bird, with a silken string attached to one foot—she may flutter her wings and fly for a certain prescribed distance, but not an inch further.

Perhaps man feels that if he gave her entire freedom there is no gauging the heights to which she might soar.

The funny thing about it is that though man is so bold and deliberate about his proposals, he would be petrified with fear if he thought a woman was actually about to propose. Through fear and embarrassment, he would probably accept. I wonder.

THE MAN FROM HOME

BY BOOTH TARKINGTON
HARRY LEON WILSON

CHAPTER XV.

"He's a Russian Noble!"

THE instant he had disappeared Ivanoff crossed rapidly to the small table near the bedroom and picked up a cigarette from a box that lay there with a bottle.

"I thought so, Russian!" he said, and in answer to Pike's look of inquiry went on: "That man your friend, who calls himself Von Grodenbarch, is not a German—he is a Russian—say only that—he is a Russian noble. I can see it in a hundred ways that you cannot."

"He helped us this afternoon," said Daniel, but Ivanoff did not seem to hear him.

"I have felt it inevitable that I should go back to Siberia ever since I came here."

"Perhaps"—began Daniel, but the other interrupted.

"There is no 'perhaps' for me. There has never been a 'perhaps' since I met Helene, my wife—she who sent me in the mines, she and my dear English friend."

A Clew to the Betrayer

For a moment Daniel was thoughtful; then he looked up quickly.

"What was his name?" he asked.

"Glenwood—you shall never forget it," the Russian replied. "He had contracts with the ministry of finance. He supplied hydraulic machinery to the government. The same Glenwood means nothing to you, and there are a million Helenes in France. I prayed God to let me meet them before I was taken, but"—He paused as a knock came upon the door. "It is the cigarette," he said hoarsely and shrank back.

"Not yet," answered Pike quietly. "Go back to your room. We won't throw our hands into the discard until we're called, and I guess we'll keep on raising." He waited a moment until Ivanoff had retired and then opened the door. Mariano stood without bowing.

"Mister Creech—she ask you would speak with her a few minutes," he said. "Where is she?" asked Pike.

"Here sir," replied the man.

"Tell her to come right in. Ah, come in, ma'am," he went on as Lady Creech appeared in the doorway. When he had closed the door behind her she said coldly:

"My brother-in-law feels that some one well acquainted with Miss Granger-Simpson's ambitions and her finer nature should put the case finally to you before we proceed to extremities," she said.

"Yes, ma'am," answered Daniel.

Revelations

"My brother-in-law has made us aware of the state of affairs, and we are all quite in sympathy as to what should be done to you, but in the kindness of our hearts we condone your offense—if you accede to our reasonable demands."

Daniel looked at his watch.

"In twenty minutes," he asked.

"In twenty minutes," she replied frigidly.

"You say he told all of you. Did he tell Miss Ethel?" Daniel asked.

"It has not been thought proper. Young girls should be shielded from everything disagreeable," she answered pompously, and Daniel grinned.

"Then, ma'am," he said. "That was the idea that got me into this trouble. You see, I knew your interest in her. I've handled all her accounts."

"If you don't mind we'll omit all tradesmanlike references," remarked the old lady coldly. "It has been suggested that you make this opposition because you have a sentimental interest in the young lady yourself. We can comprehend no other grounds."

"Me?" cried Daniel in surprise. "You can't comprehend? But you can comprehend I could have no hope, Mrs. Von?"

"One never knows," replied Lady Creech loftily. "We had thought to offer her an alliance with a family long for 100 years——"

"Yes, ma'am, I know—Crecy and Agincourt," interjected Pike, but she paid no attention.

"—has never been sullied by the low ideals of trade and barter——"

"Wait a minute, Mrs. Creech," said Daniel quickly, tugging at his coat pocket. "I've got a letter right here that tells me your brother-in-law was in business——and I respect him for it—only a few years ago."

"A letter from whom?" demanded the lady angrily, rising.

"Jim Coley, our vice consul at London. He says Mr. Hawcastle"——

"Mr. Hawcastle!" ejaculated Lady Creech.

Hawcastle's Deceit

"Well, I can call a person cap or doc or colonel, but I don't just know how to use the words you have over here for those things. I don't mean any disrespect. Just let me run on in my own way. Jim says your brother-in-law was in business in Russia"—he stopped suddenly, for an idea had occurred to him—"in business in Russia," he repeated dazedly. "Why didn't I think of that——"

"Some of your officials have been spying"—Lady Creech began, but he interrupted.

"Never mind. He was in business in Russia. I don't say he was peddling shoestrings or wienerwurst"—she shrieked. "He was probably"—he stopped a moment and looked at her. "He could not have contracts with the government for hydraulic machinery, I suppose?" he asked tensely. The old woman tossed her head.

"Even if he did, he protected the historic name," she replied proudly.

"I believe you!" said Daniel fervently. "Have you ever heard the name of—Glenwood?" he asked quickly.

"Is your mind wandering?" asked Lady Creech. "Glenwood Priory is the name of the property Miss Granata inherited from his mother. Can you state its connection with the subject?"

Daniel almost staggered with the thought he had brought that came to him. He looked up.

"That's how he protected it," he said. "He took the name of—Glenwood. God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform! Lady Creech, tell your brother-in-law he can have his answer here—in ten minutes."

As she swept from the room in dignified amazement Pike sank into a chair for a moment and fairly glowed with eagerness.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

A WITNESS in a railroad case, asked to tell in his own way how the accident happened, said:

"Well, Ole and I was walking down the track, and I heard a whistle, and I got off the track and the train went by, and I got back on the track, and I didn't see Ole; but I walked along, and pretty soon I seen Ole's hat, and I walked on, and seen one of Ole's legs, and then I seen one of Ole's arms, and then another leg, and then over one side Ole's head, and I says: 'My God! Something must happen to Ole!'"

SMILES

A SIGN OF BAD WEATHER

A NERVOUS woman on an ocean liner approached a deckhand, during a season of "bend seas," and asked:

"Have you ever seen any worse weather than this, Mr. Sailor?

"Take a word from a old salt, mum," replied the deckhand. "The weather's never very bad while there's any females on deck a-making inquiries about it."

HAD THE PRICE

In vain they told the heiress that the Duke was an impostor and worse.

"Why," said a friend, "I have read that there is a price upon his head."

But the heiress, all nerve, only answered: "I have the price."

DID HE GET IT?

"Now, Mr. Janus, I don't see how with your salary you can afford to smoke such expensive cigars," remarked a merchant severely to one of his clerks.

"You're right, sir," responded Janus, "I can't; I ought to have a bigger salary!"

A Summons

By CHESTER FIRKINS

COME you back, you Teddy Roosevelt,
Come you back from Africay!
We don't care now what the gone felt
When you shot 'em at their bay.
You have shown the aged feble
About absence is all rot,
And it's simply awfulmabel
How your pet stuff gets forgot!

For a year no man has seen
Spoken of race suicide;
Dead—and probably in Heaven—
Is the spelling simplified.
In the West the bear cubs toddle,
Perfect of your grin and gun;
Malefactor, mollycoddle,
Undenounced their courses run.

Pinchot's fired; Loeb is taking
Praise instead of goatly blame.
Gone the mighty phrase "muck-raking";
Gone the short and uglier name.
Come! We're weary now of reading
Dollar words from Jungles South.
We are starving, we are pleading
For your fierce FREE words of mouth!

NO NEED TO BE THIN

Easy to Put On Good Solid Flesh—50c Package Free.

At the Beach, the Ballroom or in Business Thin People Are Ever Objects of Ridicule.

There is no longer need to stay thin, scrawny and poorly nourished, for at last a treatment has been perfected that actually increases the weight of those who use it. This discovery is called Sargol, and is the greatest possible boon to the thin, emaciated, unattractive man or woman.

Those who start to gain a pound a day by using Sargol will not need to follow disagreeable diet rules or undergo strenuous exercises—simply a little sugar-coated tablet that soon fills out the figure with shapely curves.

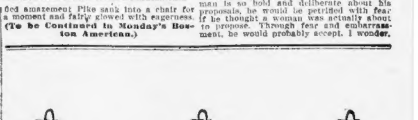
These little Sargol tablets give a gain in weight in a perfectly natural way by increasing the assimilative powers of the digestive organs so that the food you eat is changed into good, solid flesh instead of merely passing through the system without making fat or tissue.

Scientists have long sought this flesh-making element, but with no avail until the fortunate combination of Sargol solved the problem. To prove that Sargol will give a gain of from ten to thirty pounds the Sargol Company, 1209-F Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., will send a 50c. package free on receipt of 10c. in stamps or silver to pay distribution expenses. Write to-day and see how easy it is to put flesh on your bones.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUBY'S HAIR HERBS

DUBY'S HAIR COLORING HERBS restores your streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, prevents dandruff, and gives it a rich, glossy appearance. Contains no sugar of lead nor other chemicals and colors the hair as it grows. It is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers. Package makes one pint. It will produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and bring back the color to artificially gray locks. It turned gray hair, brown, dark brown or black, as you prefer. Price, postpaid, $1.00. Send a lock of hair and we will send a sample, free.



WE, too, marvel at the flavor of Orange Pekoe. We did not make that flavor. All we did was to find where such tea grew—and put it into our air-tight, parchment sealed canister, so that no breath of its goodness might be lost.

So we cannot tell you whence its flavor came, or what it is. We simply know that it is there, and that there is a difference—and that it is wonderful.

CHASE & SANBORN'S ORANGE PEKOE TEA

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

There was a man in front of me at the performance of "La Gioconda" last night who had never seen a grand opera before. He did not look like a savage, and has voice was cultured, if rather loud. He was frankly unimpressed by the music, but he did not condemn it on that account.

"I suppose grand opera, like tripe and olives, is something you get fond of gradually," he remarked. The lady who was responsible for him kept giving in a frightened manner as though she were afraid they would be put out, but there was really nothing in what he said that was not entertaining and picturesque.

It was remarkable how he could pick out things that the average opera-goer, having become accustomed to the vagaries of singers and composers, would overlook.

I discovered him during the progress of the first act. The blind mother of La Gioconda, effectively played by Fabbri, was being assailed by a mob that intended to drown her for a witch. Constantino, who was singing Enzo, came to the rescue and forced the mob back, but suddenly fled, shouting that he would get assistance.

Dance Took His Eye.

"That's a fine hero, that fellow, gone after his gang," commented the man in front. "Before he gets back they could kill the old woman a dozen times over. Now, in a regular play, the hero would have licked five or six of the ringleaders and the mob would have slunk away."

"Listen to the music," said his companion.

"Ain't I listening? When does the Miserere' come in?

"It doesn't come in during this opera."

"Why, I thought it was in all the operas."

Reninsegna was singing divinely, Constantino was glorious in the great duet with Barnaba, and Jean Forbes-Robertson displayed all the beauties of his great voice in the "Lion's Mouth" air. The first act is full of melodies of the most bewildering variety, but they had no effect on the man in front.

He twitched in his chair and was uneasy. He brightened up during the lively ballet scene, but when the curtain descended he was in gloom.

"That dance was the only thing worth while in the whole show, and then they had to ring in a church organ and spoil it."

Couldn't See It.

The second act shows Enzo's ship ready for departure. It is night. There is a charming sailor's chorus and Enzo appears and sings an exquisite love song. Constantino was in excellent voice, although he was singing for the third time this week, and the house broke into tumultuous applause. He bowed again and again and finally repeated the solo. The man in front remarked:

"That fellow has a great voice. I'd like to hear him sing 'The Holy City.'"

Next came the great duet scene between Laura, played by Claessens, and Enzo. "The Moon is Descending Into the Sea."

The man in front followed their pointing fingers and hoarsely whispered: "That's all right, but there isn't any moon."

Sure enough, the beautiful golden moon which is supposed to sink slowly into the sea was missing. Something had gone wrong with the lighting. The entrance of Gioconda and her intense dramatic scene with Laura kept him quiet for a while. At the conclusion of the duet Gioconda was about to plunge a knife into the ample form of Laura when a storm of applause burst.

Gioconda dropped the knife, took Laura's hand and both bowed low to the audience. Then Gioconda raised the knife and proceeded with the scene.

Stopped Murder for Applause.

The man in front guffawed out loud. "Why, they wouldn't do that in the wildest melodrama. Stopping a murder to take applause."

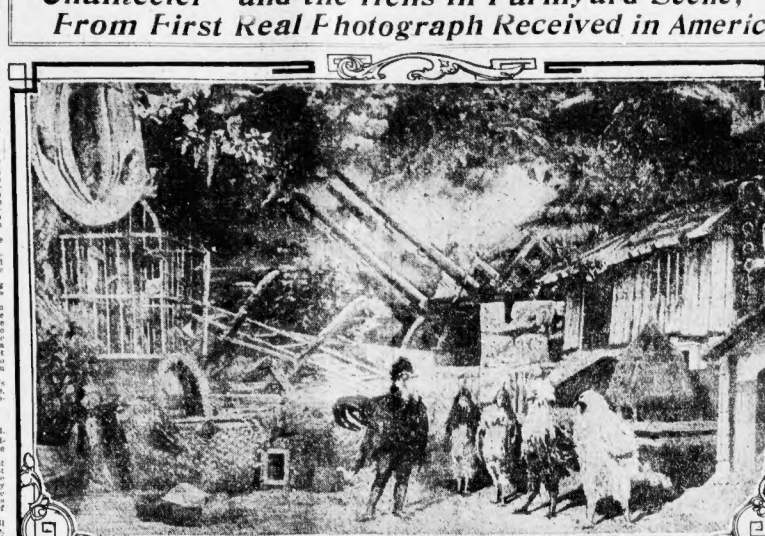
He liked the "Dance of the Hours," but who wouldn't? It is one of the greatest ballet spectacles ever presented, and he thought the chorus singing was simply great, in which he was quite right. He objected to the finale, when Gioconda stabs herself and falls dead at the feet of Barnaba.

No class to that. Na woman could kill herself with that four-inch bread knife, and especially no fat woman. She would merely scratch herself. They ought to use a pistol.

"Pistols weren't invented then," said the lady.

"Oh, well, if it comes to that, neither was opera."

"Chantecler" and the Hens in Farmyard Scene; From First Real Photograph Received in America



Scene from first act of Rostand's "Chantecler," as produced in Paris. "La Nuit de la Faisane" (the night of the Hen-Pheasant); Mr. Guitry as "Chantecler," and the hens. Note the enlarged horse-collar and basket which reduce the human actors to proper pantry proportion.

"Chantecler" Stands Alone Among Plays

Pictures from Paris give an idea of what the famous Rostand play "Chantecler" is like. It is quite unlike any play which the modern of the ancient stage has known. It will be given in Boston next year.

In Paris they call it the "Barnyard" play. It was written by Monsieur Edmond Rostand, author of "Cyrano de Bergerac."

This is one of the new American cities which will see it. It is regarded as one of the few in which it could be appreciated.

"Chantecler" was first played several weeks ago in the Theatre Porte St. Martin and from the popular viewpoint is said to lack action.

The odd thing about it in the mind of the average theatregoer is that all the characters are beasts or birds. Actors and actresses are dressed in feathers to represent rooster, hens and chickens, who are made and act like human beings and are imbued with human emotions.

Madame Simone, one of the leading actresses in the Parisian cast, plays the role of Pheasant Hen. She wears very gorgeous plumage and has full feathers of extraordinary length. Her costume cost 7,000 francs. The episode is a battle between the "Chantecler" and a screech owl.

M. Guitry has the title role. He is costumed as a stately, full breasted bird with a big spread of wings.

The most beautiful scene in the play is the last. It is embellished by all the art which Paris can employ. The setting is static. There is the side of the grandstand in Chantecler and Hen pheasant are wedded and have left the barnyard on a honeymoon trip to see the world. In the last scene they are in the heart of an ancient wood. It is night. A nightingale sings but is shot dead. There is a congregation of frogs to give a pessimistic touch. A rabbit with much wisdom in his eyes peers out from the roots of a tree.

Above is an immense spider web to illustrate the snares of life. A huge spider is lying in wait in his mesh. Toadstools abound. This is as different an environment to plumaged folk fresh from a farmyard as Palm Beach would be to a Boston dress circle. But Chantecler is disillusioned and wants to get home, but the Hen Pheasant is suffering from jealousy and also a desire for a further plunge into worldly frivolities. But after much wailing and renewed from imminent danger she is more than glad to resume the humdrum domestic role.

Opera Fashions

Notwithstanding the unusual counter-attractions of two Lenten dances, the call of the opera—"our opera"—was urgent as ever, and social leaders, popular artists and music lovers all joined in the complimentary applause so coveted by even the greatest artists.

Among the visitors from the metropolis present were Mr. Otto V. Kahn, manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company, with Mrs. Kahn, who were guests in the Parkman box with Mrs. Timothee Adamowski, who was very dainty in silvered blue cloth, with which she wore a superb necklace of diamonds and turquoise.

Noting her gown of blue, even a casual observer would be attracted to the several handsome gowns of white and silver that graced fair wearers in the second tier of boxes.

Mrs. Lester Lolnad, who was a late arrival, entertaining several box guests, selected a very dressy toilette of gobelin blue, with corsage drape of point d'alencon lace.

Particularly enticing was the opera gown worn by Mrs. F. S. Converse. Her fine figure was shown to excellent advantage by a draped gown of cerulean blue velour, the demi-trained tunic caught in watteau mode at the corsage, which was surplined in silver tissue.

In the box were Mrs. George T. Rice, who is one of the most vivacious of the society circle. Her brunette complexion was enhanced by the handsome crystal and silver corsage which was fashioned above her gown of black panne satin.

Across the horseshoe, Mrs. Arthur E. Davis was attractive in clel blue radium satin, the decolletage pearl studded and a parasitic osprey gracing her corsage.

Among the brun-ette beauties also was Mrs. Guy D. Tudor, who entertained in her mother's box, adjoining the Governor's. She wore an oriental-looking gown of black faille francaise, with garniture of French gilt, gold studded, and the corsage of diamonds was caught with emerald slides, while a clel of gold was worn in her hair.

The "Franklin sisters," Mrs. Charles Hayden and Miss Frances Franklin, were both in black, and their guest, Mrs. John Crafts wore white princess lace.

"A New York Beauty.

During the promenade in the grand foyer and the accustomed slipping of fees in the palm room, many social leaders greeted Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, who has a prepossessing personality and regal bearing.

She wore a gown of sienna brown charmeuse, in Greek simple mode, and the train touched effectively in geranium velvet, a landeau of the same adorning her hair.

Mrs. Henry D. Burnham is really selling a piece in her opera toilettes which will be difficult to equal. Last night she wore a flowered gown of white radium satin, with sleeves and bodice garniture of opalescent passementerie.

Foremost among all the music lovers present was Miss Betty Porter, whose musical devotion dictated on the luxurious performance. With a party of young friends she occupied the Charles S. Bird box, appearing in Parisian model of silk embroidered on the low decolletage. Picturesque and everything in keeping was the gown of tapestry blue chiffon velvet worn by Mrs. Francis Dana Gardner, who is also prominent in Boston music circles. Her pretty brown hair was coiled in Spanish mandy mode, and thrown into admirable relief by the inside gold garniture about her throat.

Mrs. Harry Patterson was in black crepe de chine, with tunic band of marabout. She wore jet at her ears and decolletage and her gown, in Spanish mode, was the rose pink satin.

Many Beautiful Gowns.

Miss Laura Tolman wore mulberry chiffon cloth with marabout stole of light blue, and Miss Bertha Cushing Child received much admiration in her gown of white duchess satin, prettily wrought in gold paillettes.

Mrs. Harry J. Levine was another standing all white picture, the bodice showing a quaint decoration in the silvered fleur-de-lis.

From Inge F. Mile Fely Everyne was an interested observer and incidentally was much observed. She was pleasant in quetcot satin with headdress of Bohemian garnets in pinwheel design. Her escort, who accompanied her, wore black chiffon and sapphires.

Mrs. Wallace Goodrich was handsome in coral satin, the shirred overskirt showing a petticoat of self-tone chiffon.

Mrs. C. L. Harding selected white point de lace, and Mrs. Frances Peabody was in black crepe de chine and ermine.

Mrs. Helena Wenham wore a graceful gown of one tone blue messaline, and Miss Elizabeth Hees was in champagne duvetine.

Mrs. Julius Rottenberg, handsome in white satin, with tunic drape of crystal chiffon.

A JAPANESE-GREEK FABLE

(Lafcadio Hearn in the Atlantic Monthly.)

TITHONUS was a youth very handsome and polite.

Aurora was the rosy-fingered Goddess of the Dawn—a very fine young lady with rosy fingers.

She was used to get up in the earlier morning every day, and she was very studious.

She fallen in love to Tithonus, and by her chariot taked him up to the sky.

One day she ask to him that, "Sir, I can give you all thing you want." Then he ask to her that, "Please give me the eternal life."

Hoping to enjoy the eternal life of her husband Aurora ask to Zeus, Father of all the Gods.

And soon the eternal life was bestow on Tithonus.

But Aurora forget to request for the eternal youth; therfore Tithonus have the only eternal life.

Gods have the eternality of youth as well as life.

Tithonus came to become thirty or fourty years of age.

He became every day more old.

He become TOTALLY old.

And after the duration of his life

To the last desire he begged the God to make him a grasshopper and to hop on the ground.

So for pity the God changed him into a grasshopper, which could hop about our world.

And he is hop about the ground even now, and bears the dry looking.

So from a man becomed the husband of the Goddess, and then to be changed into a vile worm!

This should teach us well to ask never the inconsistent things.

SOAKED

"What time is it?"

"I don't know."

"Isn't your watch going?"

"Worse—it's gone."

Society of both the younger and the older sets in Washington seem bent on making this a record Lenten season for the Capital, and the leaders of both groups are proving most resourceful in developing a great variety of entertainments which are being most enthusiastically received in all smart circles.

The latest diversions are ice and roller skating, and paper chases in the woods.

In the game of "hares" the route led through the woods into Rock Creek Park, along the creek and back to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. L. Johnson in Woodley Lane.

Charles D. Walcott, Jr., and Miss Mary Chew had marked out the trail by the loveliest paths along famous streams and across country. The girls "took" the fences and leaped the streams in clever fashion and showed real sport spirit in facing all obstacles.

On the return to the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson tea was served and some of the experiences of the run were recounted with great merriment.

The race was won by Henry Martin, secretary of the Swiss Legation, Lee Mc-Clung of the United States Treasury. Miss Laura Morgan, sister of Mrs. John T. Wheelwright, of Boston, and Miss Mary Hoppin of Washington.

A "lace class" has been formed to study the beautiful array of what is called "the acme of industrial art."

The class has been formed by Mrs. James W. Fletcher, the mother of Gifford Fletcher. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt has sent a fan and a lace handkerchief made of the pinafore which was sent to her from the Philippines.

Some of the other exhibitors are Countess Moltke, Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mrs. James Harriman, Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. Henner Jennings, Mrs. Cecil C. Jeller, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, Baroness Speck-von Sternberg and Mrs. Norman Williams.

Bellevue. William D. Sullivan presided. The principal speakers were Vice-President Timothy E. Hurley of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, A. P. Laughy of Springfield and F. W. Hartford of Providence.

NEW MILK LAW WILL HIT POOR SAY STORE MEN

No person or corporation shall sell or offer, expose or keep for sale at retail, milk or cream in the room or store where the same is put into bottles or receptacles.

The above law will go into effect May 1 in Boston, and will affect 4750 storekeepers. It will cause much hardship among the poor. Much complaint is already heard in various sections of the city over the injustice of this law.

For years the people have been in the habit of going to the bake-shop, the grocery store and the butcher shop for milk and have bought the same and had it poured into all kinds of receptacles and in all quantities.

On and after May 1, it is said, they will be unable to buy it in the old way. The new law probably stops storekeepers from milk in crockery jars and large cans and limits it not to quarters.

"Pill Box" Package.

Instead, the storekeepers will be compelled to buy their milk at wholesale prices from the contractors and producers by the pint and quart in packages of one kind.

If the members of the Board of Health approve of the new law, which sold milk receptacles which have been submitted for their approval people will get their milk in paraffine boxes in either pint or quart size. This so called "pill box," a name given it by Commissioner Biddle, is box shaped like a cylinder. It is fitted with a sheet smoothered lid, which can be sealed to the box when filled.

There was another contrivance also submitted to the Board of Health made of paraffine and paper, similar in shape to the present glass jar now used by milk producers, but the "pill box" is regarded more favorably. Neither, however, have met with approval as yet.

Move to Save Health.

"The new law stirred up a question of receptacles in which to hold milk," said Dr. Durgin, chairman of the Board of Health, to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, "and I am inclined to believe that the people will see a large number of specimens on the market.

"The paraffine box meets with my approval. It is a cheap, but approved vessel and when used can be destroyed without any fear.

"We have in view nothing but the protection of milk from being handled by people who might be affected with some form of skin disease. Milk should not be defiled. We are in favor of any efficient receptacle which will be free from dust.

"If it is compulsory for storekeepers to sell milk supplied them in the big pill box, as Health Commissioner Biddle calls it, it," said Charles H. Wooley, senior of weights and measures, "it will mean there will be immately 50,000 will be in daily use in Boston. It will require more work for us to do after then than one can pick up in the street.

Hard Blow to Poor.

"The paraffine box is absolutely sanitary. It cannot be washed with but water. If it is, the paraffine will melt and the paper crumble, thereby destroying the usefulness of the box. A law will undoubtedly be passed inflicting a heavy penalty for any person caught putting the box again a receptacle for milk."

A reporter visited several places in the city to find out how they felt over the new law. In a majority of cases the storekeepers did not know about the new law. They said that it would work hard on poor people who are accustomed to buying milk by the half pint of pint and quart cans or paraffine boxes or packages are sold.

"It's pretty hard the way the poor are compelled to pay high prices for the necessities of life," said one North End storekeeper. "This new milk law will mean that the wail of the child who came to us yesterday and who said 'Give me two cents worth of milk,' will have to be turned away with the statement that milk is sold by the package.

"It's pretty hard to be a storekeeper and watch a poor woman with five cents in her purse come in and try to buy three cents' worth of stale bread and five cents' worth of milk.

"The Board of Health should consider such cases. Microbes are all right in their place, but it is my opinion they are more preferable than starvation."

BOSTON PAINTERS IN WAGE CAMPAIGN

A new branch of the Painters' Union, known as the Painters' District Council of Boston, has been organized in Hingham, with jurisdiction over the towns of Hull and Weymouth. The object in the formation of a like campaign of organization by the union painters of Greater Boston.

The officers of the Hingham local are: John C. McIntyre, president and W. E. Mccarthy, secretary. It was said that the master painters were satisfied to sign a minimum wage scale of $3 a day, to go into effect April 1.

ANIMAL TALES
One Tail-less

John Deighan, a Belleville man, stole a pig last year in Revere.

The pig was sought and John was caught.

And the chances are that after what the Judge gave John, he won't steal another pig for some time.

—New Jersey Mid-Day Home Chimes.

ORIENTAL TOUR EDITOR LOS ANGELES "EXAMINER" LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Holden and Percy gave a show in Jersey City Thursday night, and their Percy disappeared. He was found in John Deighan's home in Belleville. Justice La Faucherie heard the case and Holden, after having recovered Percy, was willing to let Deighan go. But the judge thought he should be penalized, so he sentenced him to carry Percy back to Newark, about three miles. Deighan, with Percy on his back, piggy-back, started for Newark. Percy didn't care much for the ride and squealed continuous objections, but Deighan held him fast. The road to the bank lands over Bridges street hill—long and steep. Percy is no featherweight. So when Deighan reached the top of the hill he was squealing as loud as Percy. He decided for once, out no one would hold the pig, and he didn't dare to drop it.

Two Dogs Sent to Jail.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Eric Fischer of No. 162 East Fifty-sixth street walked into the East Fifty-first street station and said he had been bitten by a water spaniel dog belonging to Paul Burger. The dog was locked up in the station house to await the examination of the health department. Fischer had scarcely left the station house when Patrolman Rut entered leading a fine Boston bull. He said Lieutenant Dunn that the dog had knocked down a five-year-old boy. The Boston was locked up with the spaniel.

Bughouse? This Explains It.

ITHACA, Feb. 26.—"This is the age of bugs," solemnly said Dr. McGillivray, professor of entomology in Cornell University, in a lecture. "The number of species of insects which are known to science at the present time is estimated at 100,000,000. The bite of most spiders in North America is harmless. The kissing bug is not a bug and was so called because it bit persons on the face. Experiments along this line are today."

Trying to Breed Tailless Cat.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—To determine the effects of darkness upon various forms of animal life, experiments are being conducted with insects and fishes at the Carnegie Branch for Experimental Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor. Long Island. Experiments are in charge of Dr. A. M. Banta. Other and experiments have been in progress for some time, one of them being the effort to breed a tailless cat.

Pernicious Activity of the Stork.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 26.—The stork within the last forty-eight hours has left triplets to two families. In one instance, at the home of Edward F. Gearing, in the East End, the bird defied quarantine, for Gearing's two children had scarlet fever. Mr. and Mrs. James McGreevy of Braddock also have triplets. In each case two girls and a boy were born.

Boy Kills Two Bobcats.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 26.—Fighting single handed against a mountain bob cat and his mate, Myron Queer, twelve, slew both of the animals with a knife, but not before receiving wounds which may prove fatal. Queer is at the home of his father, Levi Queer, a farmer.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

BOSTON BEARS HAMMER COPPER

STATE STREET, Feb. 26.—The absence of outside interests in the New York stock market was taken advantage of by a number of room traders, on under selling by that element prices were forced down about 1 point or so. Jake Field was one of the most active operators on the bear side, offering Reading down from 169¼ to 168¾.

Other railroad stocks joined in this downward movement but in most of the other railroad shares the declines were only fractional.

Smelting was the weakest of industrials, declining over 1 point.

Looked out nothing in this market.

Lake Copper stock, which drove it up over 6½ points. This led a stampede to offer on the balance of the list, apart from Arizona Commercial, which maintained a position around 80. North Butte took a 1¾ point drop, but soon recovered and held firm in Lake stock. There was notable buying of nonassessable securities.

SAYS WASHINGTON WOULDN'T FIT NOW

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Senator Lafollette, Rev. Frank Washington should get into the Reyes, should be voted the biggest tablet in the hall of fame. Also all the Republican lawmakers should have memorials. Dr. Crane, who has revised the lists of the world's famous men, says:

"If George Washington were living to-day he could not be elected to office in Chicago's first ward. 'Hinky Dink' and 'Bathhouse John' would succeed in beating him. And if, by some freak of circumstances, Washington should get into the Senate, it is a mighty safe guess that Mr. Aldrich would not, for him, speak, while over in the house Uncle Joe Cannon would unceremoniously throw him down."

EVERYBODY CHEER UP. Why nobody should have the blues. Promises for the future in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Although the market is still a fluctuating one, no change in opinion has taken place, and the general trend is predicted as upward.

$ $ $

Steel, Union Pacific and Reading are all conspicuously strong.

$ $ $

These three stocks must be the leaders if the market is to advance. The recent advance in Steel common is evidence on the part of the greater speculative groups to carry the market higher, and it is obvious that the technical condition of the list is strong enough to make this achievement possible.

$ $ $

If the recent trading in the great leaders indicates anything, it suggests preparations for determined support of these shares to inaugurate a general advance of the market.

$ $ $

Banks report a heavy loss in cash, but money is so plentiful that a few millions will make no difference in the market. The Pennsylvania Railroad will soon be compelled to issue in a few days the best report in its history. As 1910 will furnish the Pennsylvania company with more business than any other year, the outlook for stockholders of that company is very cheerful.

$ $ $

Facts made public regarding the tremendous earning power of the "Panhandle" caused a sharp advance in the stock. The stock is still many points under its true price, as measured in earnings. Just before the last dividend was paid it will be put on a guaranteed 6 per cent. basis. Norfolk & Western also improved on expectation that the Pennsylvania would do something for its stockholders.

$ $ $

Brooklyn Rapid Transit showed by its action that a few bankers had the confidence of the reserve awarding $3,000,000 to the company a day after the close of the year. This award gives the company about 7 per cent. on its capital in other hands, and as it is already earning at that rate an increased dividend is a matter of routine.

$ $ $

Official announcement comes from the Steel trust headquarters that the volume of new business booked to them reports to the company, so that, although for January and February the Trust will show net earnings equal to those of the previous months, the volume of unfilled orders will not be reduced. This is much better than had been expected. Other steel companies make similar statements.

$ $ $

Atchison reported that for January its net earnings were more than a million dollars less than for January of last year. This decrease is due almost entirely to bad weather. A great tonnage of freight that was held up during the winter must be handled by the road and the business is not lost. As the Atchison was caught more or less by snowstorms, the condition of crops along the line of the road is improved as a result, so that Atchison stockholders are really better off than they would have been if the Winter has been less snowy.

$ $ $

Announcement by Western Union that it had arranged to take messages over the telephone is sure to cause investment buying of Western Union stock. The one order will mean hundreds of thousands added to its annual revenue. The stock is becoming a substantial investment issue and is a splendid speculation at present.

$ $ $

Thompson, Towle & Co. will open a Worcester office at 31 Main street on February 28, under the management of Frank E. Whittington, who for the past thirteen years has been in the stock and bond business in Worcester, the last few years as manager for Fisk & Robinson.

$ $ $

F. R. Williams, for the past thirteen years manager of the grain department of Paine, Webber & Co., will assume a similar position with Hayden, Stone & Co., on Monday next, February 28.

Good Things to Eat

With the advent of the "ten dollar hog" the prices of pork products in Boston are mounting to unattainable heights. With common and well selling at 25 cents a pound many Bostonians express a fear that their Sunday couple food, pork and beans, will become a dessert.

The way that poultry keeps at one price week after week is a matter of some amazement on the part of buyers, both at wholesale and retail. The price has scarcely varied a fraction of a cent since Thanksgiving, when it reached the high water mark.

Since that time there have been no Eastern turkeys in the market and Western turkeys have been selling high.

Dry packed turkeys bring as high as 25 cents, while fowls sell at 22 cents with an upward. Fowl is selling for 20 to 25 cents and roasting chickens for 25 to 30.

Butter is selling higher than last week, and the tendency seems to be upward. Last week butter was selling at 40 and 42 cents a pound higher than in New York, but the New York and Chicago markets have advanced even more than those of Boston.

Fine Northern creamery butter is now selling for about 38 to 40 cents a pound, and the finest dairy butter about three cents a pound cheaper.

Eggs are higher than last week. Strictly fresh nearby eggs can be bought for about 35 cents a dozen and selected large fancy eggs for 38 cents.

The delicacies of the season are very high but rare. Hot-house cucumbers are selling for 40 to 50 cents a pound, about twice the usual price. Lettuce and all varieties of salad greens are high. Celery is scarcer and poor in quality this winter and there is much complaint by housekeepers on this account.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

LEAHY GIVES ADDRESS.

WALL STREET OPENING WEAK

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Expectation of a bank statement showing a large loss in cash, together with a range of lower prices from London for American shares, caused stocks to open weak in Wall Street to-day. Losses were confined to fractions, and trading was extremely dull, the ticker at one time coming to a standstill. Specialties were largely neglected.

Another decrease of 6,987 in the number of idle railroad cars is reported for the two weeks ending February 10, with an increase of 3,379 in the number in use.

On the New York curb market coppers were firm.

CLERK IS ACCUSED BY 5 YOUNG GIRLS

LEOMINSTER, Feb. 26.—E. Fred Pye waived examination when arraigned before Justice Harry C. Bascom here to-day on the charge of illtreating five little girls, ranging in age from eleven to fourteen years. He was held in $5,000 for the Grand Jury. He is clerk at the Columbia House, where the girls live.

Y. M. C. A. FILLS HALL'S PLACE

SOUTHBRIDGE, Feb. 26.—Samuel D. Ferry has been elected treasurer of the Young Men's Christian Association to succeed John A. Hall, treasurer of the Southbridge Savings Bank, and who is charged with stealing nearly $500,000 from the latter institution.

Henry F. Currier of Malden, a national bank examiner, arrived here yesterday and visited the national bank. His visit, coming after the savings bank trouble, caused much comment. Treasurer F. L. Chapin of the national bank said: "There is no special occasion for Mr. Currier's visit. He always come here in February and in August. He was not sent here to make any special examination of the books. His visit was expected."

Examiner Currier did not stay long in Southbridge and from this town visited the national bank in Spencer.

SELECTMEN NOT BEHIND DANCE

ATTLEBORO, Feb. 26.—In the investigation that has been made relative to the so-called "Salome" dance, that was given for the enlightening of 250 members and guests of the Attleboro Driving Association, it has been learned that none of the members of the Board of Selectmen had anything to do with the arrangement of the affair.

George A. Sweeney, one of the selectmen, who is in the house furnishing business in this place, is speaking of his part in the matter, made this statement:

"It was there as an invited guest. The secretary of the association has admitted that he negotiated through a Boston agency for a woman to appear on that occasion to give a song and dance."

Neither Sweeney nor the other members of the Board of Selectmen, they declare, was aware of the character of the young woman's performance until she dashed upon the stage.

—Many of the better class of people have a good room for rent. But you'd never know it by walking down the street. They prefer not to commercialize their homes by nailing up a sign or placard on the doors or windows—

MERCHANTS TO JOIN TO BOOM NEW ENGLAND

New England business, prosperity and activity are going forward under new impetus to-day on account of the general "boost" given this section of the country at the dinner of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Pilgrim Publicity Association. Every business man, financier and professional man in Greater Boston and New England as well feels to-day that his interests are advanced through this gathering. The dinner took place last night at the Hotel Somerset. Nearly five hundred representative men of Greater Boston attended.

In the absence of former Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., on account of illness, James H. Fahey presided. Bernard J. Rothwell called the assembly to order, and introduced Rabbi Harry Levi, who spoke of the awakening of the New England spirit and the determination of the business men of this section to keep abreast of the times.

New Spirit Building.

The first speaker of the evening, President George W. Coleman of the Pilgrim Publicity Association, discussed "The Building of the New Spirit." He said in part:

"Some good men may altogether the presence of this new spirit among us, but your presence to-night is the finest evidence that it has got hold of you. It is simply a result of that spirit which made New England dominant for generations, through its achievements in manufactures, education and philanthropy. It is the part of the general awakening which is manifest to-day in so many directions.

Edward Killory Hall, who spoke on "Merchandising by Wireless," said in part:

"While all the rest of the country is moving forward with colossal strides, here some of you sit with all kinds of money and all kinds of opportunities, and do nothing with a figure jumble while the city is full of signs. 'The best thing you know the rest of the country will get off on you, leave you sitting on your Plymouth Rock, thanking it for the privilege of doing so, to where is my wandering business to-night?'

Worth of Advertising.

"Imagination in Business" was the topic of Louis F. Deland, who said, among other points:

"The advertising man is a creator. Oliver Wendell Holmes says that men who have creative power are hand-picked by the Almighty God, while the rest of the world is merely stamped out by machinery."

Settling Wage Questions with Bullets and Bombs

An End Must Come to That Anarchical Condition, and BOTH SIDES MUST COMPROMISE

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner

This country has seen in the past few days, as it has too often seen in the past, a bloody strike by workingmen.

Philadelphia has been for nearly a week, as Chicago, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Denver and hundreds of other American cities have been in the past, in a state of civil war.

Peaceful citizens, for no fault of their own, are subjected to discomfort, and even to risk of life. Families are made to suffer want and anxiety, legitimate business and industry are interfered with, and all because

THOSE THAT OWN CERTAIN PUBLIC MONOPOLIES AND THOSE THAT WORK FOR THE MONOPOLIES CANNOT AGREE IN REGARD TO WAGES.

We do not propose to discuss here in detail the question of wages involved, or the question as to the justice of the men's demands, or the propriety of the employers' refusal.

Suffice it to say that on both sides there is decided fault.

The employers are at fault, for there is no doubt that they have underpaid and overworked their men disgracefully in the past. There is no doubt that the street car corporation is deliberately planning to break up the unions, to do away with the semi-decent conditions that the men had established after a long struggle.

There is no doubt that the employing corporation has played a treacherous and hypocritical part, in the organization of fake rival unions and otherwise.

And the men, of course—no matter what the justice of their demands as to wages—WERE IN THE WRONG FROM THE MOMENT THEY STRUCK THE FIRST BLOW.

No man has a right to fire bullets or throw bombs, risking the lives of innocent citizens, UNDER ANY POSSIBLE CONDITIONS.

And no wrong done by an employer, corporation or individual can justify any man in risking or in taking life.

It is true beyond question that the street car corporation refuses decent wages and decent hours in order that it may earn bigger dividends on watered stocks and extract greater profit from franchises, from monopolies secured in the beginning by bribery and based on crime.

But, aside from all that, the great question that stands out is this: ARE INDUSTRIAL QUESTIONS, CONSTANTLY COMING UP, CONSTANTLY MORE COMPLICATED AND DIFFICULT, TO BE SETTLED IN AMERICA WITH THE USE OF THE BULLET AND THE BOMB, MOUNTED POLICE AND SPECIAL STATE CONSTABULARY, OR HIRED PINKERTON THUGS, in the public streets, at the risk of the lives of citizens?

Is this to be permanently a Republic governed by laws made to order by corporations, and interrupted by a series of small civil wars for the adjustment of individual wage discussions?

And if not, how is the change to be brought about?

Corporations, without soul or responsible individuality back of them, are becoming more and more the great employers of labor. They have become already practically THE ONLY EMPLOYERS OF LABOR ON A BIG SCALE.

These corporations monopolize the public necessities. They own the streets, the railroads, the right to move the population from place to place. They own the gas companies, the coal supply, the food supply.

The public, on the one hand, is entirely at the mercy of these corporations in regard to the prices it shall pay—unless by legislation it can control these prices.

And the great body of the workingmen are at the mercy of these corporations as to the wages they receive, unless they can in some way control those wages.

It is useless and childish to tell workmen that they must be quiet, and submissive, and calm, and take gratefully whatever may be given to them. THEY WON'T DO THAT, AND SANE MEN KNOW THAT THEY WON'T DO IT. They know that the money withheld from them by payment of insufficient wages and the profits earned by overworking them go into the pockets largely of disreputable, dishonest men, bribe givers, corrupters of legislation.

The great masses of corporation workmen lack utterly all respect for those that employ them, AND THE LACK OF RESPECT IS JUSTIFIED.

How is the situation to be met? It must be met by a recognition of conditions, by a recognition of the fact that where a collection of individuals secure for themselves a public necessity and monopoly, THEY ARE NOT LORDS AND MASTERS AND SOLE DICTATORS OF CONDITIONS.

They receive from the public vast fortunes, they must submit to public dictation, at least to fair arbitration, as to the part of their profits that shall go to the working masses.

It's all very well for the corporation to say, "Leave me alone, and I'll attend to my working people, and beat them down, and raise my dividends."

And it's all very well for the labor unions to say, "Leave me alone, and I'll attend to the corporation that employs me, and beat it to its knees, with the bludgeon if necessary, and get the money I want."

THAT is the talk that might have been expected, and that could only have been justified, in the days before government was established on earth, in the days of the club and the spear and the hand-to-hand combat.

And it is the talk—to our disgrace be it said—in this Republic at this day!

The people have got to have their day in strikes in wage questions, and miniature civil wars have got to end.

The street railroad strike interests, as regards wages, a handful of corporation agents that are paid to save every cent they can in expenses, and scrape together every dollar that they can for dividends, a body of dividend-getters who do no work, and some thousands of hard-worked and irritated employes.

Ten thousand men altogether, perhaps, are interested financially in such a strike. They fight it out in the public streets like two dogs that meet and quarrel, utterly regardless of the rights and the infinitely greater interest of a population of two millions or more.

Conditions have got to be taken as they are, and not preached about as they should be. While one corporation pays men low wages and works them long hours, and another corporation raises the price of the meat they eat while dishonest politicians increase taxes and rents, there's no use in preaching passive submission and patience to the millions of workers who know that they are being robbed North, South, East and West.

If the general public, the law-making power, fails to provide a solution of the problem, YOU WILL HAVE SUCH SCENES AS YOU ARE HAVING IN PHILADELPHIA.

And there's no use telling the corporation agent of a monopoly that he should be just if not generous—for he isn't paid to be just; he is paid to GET DIVIDENDS.

You can't say to the professional labor leader that his demands should be granted as fast as they occur to him, for he makes his money and increases his power by increasing wages regardless of right and reason, just as the corporation agent makes his profit by increasing dividends regardless of justice.

A third must be the judge, the arbitrator. And in these American labor disputes, that have degenerated into riot, bloodshed and miniature civil war, the third party, THE PUBLIC, must be the arbitrator.

There must be an end to bullets flying, and bombs exploding, and mounted constabulary riding down innocent women and children, every time a corporation tries to swindle its workmen out of decent pay, or every time an enterprising labor leader tries to build up his own pocketbook by some unreasonable demand.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

IT was raining last nite wen Pa came hoam, & Pa was wet all over, his eyes was wet, too, he had been crying. For goodness sake, sed Ma, brace up. Tears is unmanly, Ma sed, why do you weep?

I can't help it, sed Pa, I have jest been out with a cuppel of gents from Denmark, & they felt so bad about Nelson's defeet that I started to cry with them, beekans, as you know, sed Pa, I have a vary sympathetik natur. I have often noticed that, sed Ma, you are so considerate of me & my feelings. Get in that dining room, now, and eet yure cold dinner.

Alas, sed Pa, I cannot eet. I am to full for utterans, sed Pa, & them that that has broken harts cannot dine. Poor littel Nelson, sed Pa. I thought Nelson won the fight, sed Ma. What Nelson? sed Pa. Admiral Nelson, sed Ma. Oh, dear me, sed Pa, you dount eesten know what I am talking about. I am talking about Battling Nelson, that was the grate life wate champeen of the world until a gent from Milwaukee took it away from him the other day. And his name was Wolgast, too, sed Pa, think of a champeen named Wolgast.

Eet yure dinner, sed Ma, & forget these savage tales of war. I cannot eet, I tell you, sed Pa. My two (2) Dane frends are out on the porch crying now. I am going to ask them in. So Pa calm in with two men, thare eyes were stil full of teers. Bear frends, sed Pa, shake hands with my wife, she will be vary glad to met any frend of mine, & then we will go in the library & have sum snuff & Auld Veet, sed Pa, with I nought on the way hoam.

Ma dident like Pa's two frends at all. One (1) of them had on a red & green necktie & a blue shirt with white stole all over it, & he forgot to talk off his hat until he knocked it off with his handkerchief wen he was wiping his eyes. The other gentelman had a long mustache with wax turned down on the ends & he had a cane in one hand & a umbrella in the other so he cuddent wipe the teers off his face, so he just let them fall off his face onto the umbrella. He was awful bowlegged & his pants was too short.

Now, sed Pa, we will all have a littel session in the library, Wile my wife is cleering off the tabel. Dount we git anything in the way of eats sed one of Pa's frends. Alas, sed Pa, we cannot eet, beekans my wife felt so bad wen the grand littel Dane was beaten that she cuddent cook any dinner, cud you, wife? Ma dident answ, she jest kep looking at Pa & his funny frends & thay jest kep crying. Then Pa ineegan to sing:

There is greef in Copenhagen,
There is sorrow over there,
The poor old Kink of Denmark
Is taring out his hair.

It is pritty tuff on the Kink, at that, sed Pa, wen you come to think of it. He wasent so vary long ago that Old Doctor Cook put one over on him, & now the grateest Dane of the age has been cuffed into a peak by a German from Milwaukee. But my dear frends here can better expres to you, sed Pa, the hartfelt greef wich we all feel.

You & yure dear frends run get together & stay together, sed Ma. Bobbie, take three chairs out on the porch, and three handkerchiefs, & let these boobs weep themselves silly.

Then Pa went out on the porch with his two frends & thay all sat there & cried. Ma & me dident cry, we had to laf.

Battleships for the Argentine can be built here more cheaply than similar ships for the United States. Such is the tariff.

The woman who connected a milk bottle to her toe with a long thread, and was thus aroused in time to catch a thief, should be on the detective force.

A suffragette restaurant, with meatless meals, is proposed. The combination seems rather unpromising for mere sordid business purposes.

According to an African rancher, it takes "no wonderful marksmanship to hit an elephant or a rhinoceros." It evidently does take good marksmanship to hit a Trust.

Halley's comet is due on April 1. Regular as the comets are, it must take some train dispatching to keep them all on the schedule.
